At a General Meeting of the Surtees Society, held in Durham Castle, on Tuesday, June 1st, 1915, the Rev. Dr. Gee in the chair,

It was resolved,

That a volume of Miscellanies be prepared for the Society, to consist of the following Articles:—

I.—Two Thirteenth-Century Assize Rolls for the County of Durham, now preserved in the Public Record Office, to be edited by Mr. K. E. Bayley.

II.—North Country Deeds, from originals in the same repository, to be edited by the Secretary.

III.—Diocesan and Provincial Visitations in the Fifteenth Century, from the Registers of the Archbishops of York, to be edited by Mr. A. Hamilton Thompson.

INTRODUCTION.

IT was during the early part of the thirteenth century that the Bishops of Durham consolidated those palatinate privileges which attained their fullest development at the end of that century, when Anthony Bell, "of that state and greatness as never any Bishop was, Woolsey excepted,"* ruled the diocese. Of the origin of those privileges it is not necessary to speak, but for the proper understanding of the two Assize Rolls which form this volume it is requisite that some reference should be made to the development of those privileges during the latter part of the twelfth and the beginning of the thirteenth centuries.†

That the great franchise of Durham did not disappear under the centralizing movement of Henry II.'s reign is due to Hugh Pudsey, Bishop from 1153 to 1195. A cousin of the King, he not only successfully resisted those centralizing tendencies, but obtained charters confirming his jura regalia, and, on Richard I.'s accession, extended their area by purchasing Sadberge, that narrow and ill-defined strip of territory‡ which, bordering on the river Tees, until then formed part of the county of Northumberland. Pudsey was succeeded by Philip of Poitou, who had to pay first 500 marks to Richard I. and then 1200 to King John for the confirmation of the grant of Sadberge. After his death in 1208 the see remained vacant during nine stormy years of John's rule—or misrule. The Bishopric in the capable hands of

* Coke, "Institutes," iv., 216.

† The materials for this short sketch are mainly drawn from Lapsley's "County Palatine of Durham" and the "Victoria County History of Durham," ii., 142 seq.

‡ The rolls here printed enable the actual area of Sadberge to be identified more certainly than heretofore.

Robert Vipont, Philip of Ulcote, and Aimeric, Archdeacon of Durham, stood steadfast by the King, who benefited largely by the episcopal revenues. The long vacancy had one important effect: it saw a great development of the franchise of the Prior and Convent of Durham, who attempted to oust the jurisdiction of the Bishop in matters secular, in the same way that the Bishop, for his franchise, claimed exemption from the jurisdiction of the royal courts. A long and bitter dispute ensued lasting during Richard Marsh's episcopate (1217—1226) and only coming to an end in 1229, when Bishop Poor effected a compromise, the terms of which are set out in the "Convenit." This document, and still more the "attestationes testium," which fortunately have been preserved,* throw considerable light on the administration of the Bishopric during the period preceding the Assize Rolls here printed. Difficulties not dissimilar in their nature arose between the Bishop and his great feudatories the Balliols, the Bruces, and the Nevilles, the dispute in the two former cases being complicated by the Balliol and Bruce fees being situate in Sadberge. However, it was finally decided that the Bishop had the same jura regalia in Sadberge as in the remainder of the Bishopric, and, shortly after the middle of the thirteenth century, the Bishop's sway was undisputed.

Now, in order that the Bishop should be able to deal with all causes of dispute within his franchise, it was necessary that his courts should be transformed from a mere seignorial court into one modelled on the royal courts. When this transformation began is not known, but it seems reasonable to attribute it to Pudsey, who had acted as a royal justice, and this at a time when the royal courts were being greatly developed.† However this may be, it appears from a case in the royal courts at the beginning of the thirteenth century that it was doubtful if the Bishop's court was competent to deal with a case of the grand assize.*

* "Feodarium Prioratus Dunelmensis" (Surtees Society, 1871), 212 seq.

† The point is fully discussed by Lapsley, op. cit., 161 seq. Bishop Richard Marsh also acted as a justice in eyre in 1218, "Cal. Pat.," 1216—1225, 206.

The long vacancy from 1208 to 1217 was doubtless not without effect, for the men of the Bishopric would become familiar with the procedure of the royal courts and the advantages incident to the new forms of process available there.† Hence it is not a matter of surprise to find a few years later in the rolls here printed that the procedure appears to be the same as that in the royal courts.

Of the two rolls which form this volume one relates to an eyre held in 1242, whilst the other records the legal business of the wapentake of Sadberge during the year 1235-6.

A thirteenth-century eyre‡ was a very different thing from the modern assize, for its main objects were the raising of money and the ascertainment that the Bishop's rights and privileges had not in any way been interfered with since the last eyre; incidentally a few, but only a few, criminals were tried, and still fewer were convicted. The money was obtained by fining§ every individual or community for every neglect of duty since the last eyre, and, needless to say, the standard of duty for this purpose was exceedingly high. The slightest slip in the complicated procedure was duly noted, and the luckless individual or community had to pay for his or their act of omission or commission. Unfortunately the

* The case is printed, Lapsley, op. cit., 313. It is of interest to note that the plaintiff (Galfridus filius Galfredi), who desired to oust the Bishop's jurisdiction, is one of the Bishop's justices in 1235, before whom the Sadberge cases were tried, infra, p. 76.

† In 1227 (sede vacante) an eyre was held in the Bishopric. Martin de Pateshull, that great and indefatigable judge who "works from sunrise until night," presided ("Cal. Close," 1227—31).

‡ The classic work on the subject is Maitland's "Pleas of the Crown for the County of Gloucester." See also "The Eyre of Kent" (Selden Society), 3 vols., "Northumberland Assize Rolls" (Surtees Society), "Somerset Pleas" (Somerset Record Society). For the French procedure at this period, Esmein "Hist. de la procédure criminelle," Ducowdray, "Les Origines du Parlement de Paris et la Justice."

§ Technically they were amerced—a fine was fixed by the judges—an amercement by "honest men of the neighbourhood," M^cKechnie, "Magna Carta," 334; Maitland, "Gloucester Roll," xxxiv.

roll of fines has not been preserved, but the amounts were generally fixed on a traditional scale. And here it may be mentioned that the "Convenit"—the agreement between the Bishop and the Prior and Convent—provides that, if any man of the Prior's fee is fined in the Bishop's court, the amount shall be fixed by the oath of four men—two from the Bishop's fee and two from the Prior's fee—the resultant fine being divided between the Bishop and the Prior.*

The other rights and privileges which were the subject of inquiry at the eyre were mainly those incidental to the Bishop's position as feudal overlord—questions as to the wardship of infants, the marriage of widows, and the value of their lands, the keeping of the assizes of cloth and of weights and measures, interference with rights of fishery had to be answered and the then state of the case put on record for future reference.†

Of the names of the judges before whom the eyre is held only two are named at the head of the roll—Robert fitz Meldred and Richard Duket. From case 47 it would appear that Geoffrey fitz Geoffrey was one of their fellow justices. Fortunately three different records of litigation have preserved the names of the other justices—Geoffrey of Lewkenor, John of Rumsey, and Walter de Merton.‡

* "Feodarium Prior. Dun.," 215. The clause contains the following: "liber homo salvo continemento suo" (as to this obscure term see Pollock and Maitland, "Hist. of English Law," ii., 515; M'Kechnie, "Magna Carta," 345) "mercator salva merchandia sua, rusticus salvo wauwagio suo." The terms of the settlement effected by the "Convenit" indicate that it is not so much the question of jurisdiction, but of the profits incidental to the exercise of that jurisdiction, which were in dispute. Hence the settlement gives the jurisdiction to the Bishop and half the incidental profits to the Prior.

‡ The records referred to are:—

1. A fine levied at Sadberge on 25 June 1242, "Guisbro' Chartulary" (Surtees Soc., 1891), ii., 333.

2. Quit Claim by Gerardus de Caldwell to the Prior of Finchale, "The Priory of Finchale" (Surtees Soc., 1837), 108.

3. Inspeximus of Proceedings at Durham in the 2nd year of Bishop Farnham, "Durham Cursitor" (Public Record Office), No. 92, Roll 2 of Bishop Toby Matthew, membrane 16d.

Robert fitz Meldred was the Lord of Raby and ancestor of the Durham branch of the Neville family. The date of his birth is not known, but he succeeded to his father's estates in 1195. He was one of the most influential men in the Bishopric, and had for many years been prominent in the Bishop's council and courts.*

Richard Duket, "that inquisitive person," was a royal justice of long standing,† whilst Merton is the future Chancellor of England; in 1242 he was Chancellor to the Bishop, and is so referred to in the Inspeximus above referred to.‡ Lewkenor was the Bishop's steward, then the most important administrative officer of the Palatinate.§

Rumsey was Lewkenor's predecessor in the office of steward,‖ whilst Geoffrey fitz Geoffrey, the Lord of Horden, was, like Robert fitz Meldred, not only a territorial magnate, but also well versed in the business of the Bishopric.¶

The bench it will thus be seen was a strong one, consisting as it did of two representatives of the landowning class, three important administrative officials, and a royal judge of considerable standing.

The place or places where the eyre was held are not mentioned in the roll, but it is evident that the cases

‡ The Chancellorship to the Bishop was the first important post held by Merton. In 1242 he would not appear to have had any experience as a royal justice ("Dict. Nat. Biog."; Foss, "Lives of the Judges," iii., 129).

§ He is so referred to in the Inspeximus mentioned above, and probably is the person who became a royal justice later in the thirteenth century (Foss, iii., 118). For the office of steward, see Lapsley, op. cit., 77.

 As the conduct of the Bishop's steward would be likely to be called in question in the course of the eyre his inclusion as a justice seems peculiar; it will also be noticed that Robert fitz Meldred appears in more than one case, e.g., 243, 291.

relating to Sadberge were not dealt with at Durham,* whilst the absence of any reference to adjournments, etc., to Durham in cases from the other wards seems to imply that they were held at Durham† and the Sadberge cases were dealt with there, Sadberge being then a place of some importance, with a prison which seems to have answered to the medieval conception of that establishment as a place whence the prisoners escaped.‡

As a rule the people of the Bishopric were fortunate in not having to travel far, except in the case of those unfortunate individuals who dwelt in the detached portions of the Bishopric on the Scottish Border and had to travel the length of Northumberland to attend the eyre at Durham.§ Even they were fortunate in comparison with the suitors and jurors in other counties, who were liable to be called upon to attend the Royal Courts at Westminster.

When the very large number of persons who had to attend the eyre is borne in mind—for not only had all the county officials to attend, but also representatives of each township, to say nothing of the jurors, the parties to the cases, and numberless pledges of all kinds, the only noticeable absentees being the criminals—the question of providing a suitable court must have been one of difficulty. The rolls contain no indication on the subject, and it is

* From the fact that Sadberge prisoners were sent to Durham (3, 13) it would almost look as though they were tried there, but the entries in reference to Durham in cases 36 and 38 appear to be conclusive that the Sadberge cases were not heard there.

† The terms of the "Convenit" support the view that Durham was the place of trial: "Si hominis Episcopi de Norhamshire veniant ad placitandum corum justiciariis apud Dunelm." The alternative place of trial was Norham, and it is evident that the Norham cases at this eyre were not tried there as they entered among those relating to the Chester Ward, vide infra.

‡ Hatfield's "Survey" (Surtees Soc., 1856), 194, gives some indication of the importance of the place; the number of burgages held of the Bishop is noticeable. The entry of rent in the "Survey" in reference to the prison is suggestive: "pro evasione, si accideret, prisonariorum."

§ The entries in reference to Norham and the other outlying districts are mixed up with those relating to the Chester Ward after case 316.

probable that the court sat in a church.* It will be noticed that the eyre roll, unlike in this respect the Sadberge roll, does not give any date except the episcopal year of the Bishop. From the fine referred to on p. xii. we know that the justices were at Sadberge on June 25th, and the dates referred to in cases 36 and 157 indicate that the eyre was held at the end of June and the beginning of July 1242, a very suitable period in the county of Durham, as the business of the eyre would be over before the haymaking season began—a matter of much importance when the very large number of persons who had to attend is borne in mind.

It would appear that the eyre roll is the actual record made by the clerk of the court. The very large number of clerical errors which appear in the text—they are not all due to remissness on the part of the editor—indicate that the entries were hurriedly made, whilst the character of the writing does not suggest that it is a transcript. The nature of some of the marginal notes may be quoted in support of this view, e.g., "cras" opposite cases (119, 122, 178, 336), and "die mercurii" (221) and "post prandium" (361). Further, several of the entries are left in an unfinished condition (e.g., 44, 194), and in some instances additions have been made in a different hand at, apparently, a later date (109, 161).

It should, however, be mentioned that in certain cases (e.g., 106) the entry after the word "Postea" does not appear to have been added later, but it does not seem impossible that such additions were made on the same day but at a later hour, and that the clerk, knowing that such addition would have to be made, left the necessary space—this supposition is supported by the not infrequent spaces left between entries in the roll. The difficulties of the clerk are illustrated by case 307, where a presentment by the township of Gateshead was either not heard or overlooked—it rather suggests a crowded and somewhat noisy court.

* The Galilee, at the west end of Durham Cathedral, was used at an earlier date as a court. This appears from the evidence of witnesses in the dispute between the Bishop and the Prior, which was settled by the "Convenit." There is some difference between the witnesses as to the place where a certain case was tried; the Galilee, the Palace Green (placia), and the house of Gilbert Hansard are all mentioned ("Feodarium," 252).

As to the nature of the entries on the roll, the following advice given by the late Professor Maitland* must be borne in mind:—

"We are evidently dealing, not with a document carefully made up after the judicial business which it describes was over, but with a collection of notes jotted down while that business was actually going on. Consequently, we must expect language which is summary, elliptical, disjointed. It must be allowed that the Latin is bad; by which is meant not merely that it is medieval Latin (Bracton's Latin is good enough, though it is the Latin of the thirteenth, not of the first century), but that it is bad Latin in the same sense that modern 'notes of evidence' are bad English. One must read it in jerks, as one would read the notes which judges and counsel now make in court; one must be prepared for very sudden changes of nominative, and willing to fill up breaches of grammar with common sense."

To illustrate the procedure a few typical cases may be taken. Case 106 records that Thomas of Easington accidentally killed his son. Thomas was imprisoned, but as was almost always the case, he was released on finding pledges that he would appear before the justices. He accordingly appears before the judges. The jury—not the petty jury of our day, but the presenting jury, the ancestor of our grand jury—say that Thomas killed his son by misfortune and not by either anger or hatred. Thomas is accordingly placed in the custody of the constable of the castle—of Durham evidently—until the justices have had an opportunity of discussing the question with the Bishop, doubtless with a view of a free pardon being granted, for the judges have no power to acquit a man who was found to have committed homicide by misadventure.* Thomas, however, is not kept in prison, as he finds two pledges who undertake to produce him if any one desires to take action against him in connection with his son's death.

Case 130 is an example of action by an approver, a criminal who, in consideration of his successfully prosecuting a certain number of other criminals, is allowed to go free. In this case Stephen of Trindon denounces Geoffrey of Haswell, who is arrested and then released on finding pledges that he will attend before the judges. Subsequently Geoffrey steals corn and is caught red-handed, but luckily for him the value of the corn is only two pence, for he would have been hung without trial had the value exceeded a shilling as a hand-having thief.† When brought up before the county court he confesses that he stole the corn, but no reference is made to his having suffered any punishment for his petty larceny, such as whipping or the loss of an ear. At the eyre the jury state that they do not suspect Geoffrey of any offence except that of stealing corn, and he is therefore acquitted, but at the same time is ordered to quit the Bishopric unless he obtains the Bishop's permission to return.‡ Of the fate of Stephen, the approver, who was unsuccessful in his other prosecution (131), there is no record. Hanging it was, no doubt, but as there was no property for the Bishop to claim, the clerk omitted to record the obvious result of his lack of success. The roll contains several other cases of approvers (1, 2, 90, 91 and 92) who attempted to fight their way to freedom, for, as a rule, the decision depended on the duel fought with staffs, as in the case (90) where Robert, the son of Abraham, was denounced by Stephen, overcome by him in the duel, and hung. In another case (2) the defendants summarily disposed of the approvers by hanging them, a procedure which apparently does not call forth any adverse comment, or even a fine by the judges.

* Pollock and Maitland, ii., 479.

† Ibid., ii., 495, "Northumberland Assize Roll" (Surtees Soc.), 70.

‡ From his acquittal it would appear that he had already been punished by the county court for his theft.

One of the principal methods of bringing criminals to book was personal action on the part of the person injured, who "appeals" the defendant.

In case 119 we have a series of appeals which followed on what appears to have been a faction fight on Houghton Moor. Alan of Houghton comes before the court, and in minute detail describes the injuries he had received at the hands of Hamo, serjeant of the Lord of Hurworth; the hour, the place, the nature of the wound, the weapon, and amount of money stolen are all carefully specified, followed by an offer to prove (dis-racionare) in the usual way, i.e., by duel. To these charges Hamo does not plead a direct negative; he takes exception to Alan's process, and claims that he is not called upon to reply to him on the grounds that, though appealed with words of felony, Alan had not raised the "Hue and Cry,"* that he had not made sufficient suit,† and that the wounds are not visible.

To this defence Alan admits that he did not raise the hue and cry, but states that he laid his complaint before the Bishop's bailiff at Durham, and had shewn his wounds at the county court. The judges, however, dismiss the appeal, and the luckless Alan is fined for his "false" appeal and ordered to be imprisoned. This, however, does not end the case, which is referred to the jury to be dealt with on its merits, the appeal having failed on purely technical grounds. The jury say that Alan was beaten, but not robbed, and that the hue and cry was not raised. They assess the damage sustained by Alan at five shillings, which Hamo and another Hurworth man have to pay.

Though there are a number of cases of appeal on the roll it is but seldom that there is any definite result. In most cases the prosecutor fails either to put in an appearance or to proceed with the appeal, but, as has been seen above, a failure of the appeal did not absolve the defendant, who as a rule had to stand his trial by the court. Of criminal trials of what would now be considered the usual kind there are singularly few, for in most cases the criminal fled, or in the very few cases where he was caught summary punishment was inflicted. As a result there are a number of cases where the criminal has been outlawed, the main interest of the court being in securing his chattels for the Bishop, and also the beneficial uses of his land for a year and a day. Owing to the paucity of punishments available—for there was nothing between death and the various minor penalties, such as loss of an ear, whipping, etc., and imprisonment was not then regarded as penal, but merely as a means of obtaining payment of a fine or securing an individual's presence—the court is not severe on defendants who, though guilty of the offence with which they are charged, otherwise have an unblemished character; in such cases (350) the defendant is allowed to return on finding pledges for his future good behaviour.

Table I. at the end of this Introduction contains a rough analysis of the criminal entries on the roll, indicating the nature of the crime, the procedure, and the result. The numerous cases of outlawry and undetected criminals shew that the system of amateur police then in force was anything but satisfactory, and viewed in that light the constant fining of delinquent townships for allowing offenders to escape was very necessary. It should be mentioned here that there was no system of frankpledge* in the Bishopric, the offender's township being the responsible unit, even, it would appear, when the crime was committed outside the township (164, 166). Again, there was no murdrum fine, and Englishry has not therefore to be presented.†

All things considered, the number of cases of sanctuary recorded is somewhat small, but the advantages of simple flight were greater, for in those days the plunge into the unknown, which the process of abjuring the realm involved,

* In seventeenth and eighteenth centuries there are references to view of frankpledge, but it would appear to be an innovation. As to frankpledge, vide Pollock and Maitland, i., 568.

† Ibid., ii., 487; Cal. Close Rolls, 29 March 1227, p. 179.

would be somewhat terrifying to the ordinary offender, whilst the roll (207) records the fate of a certain Richard, who, having abjured the realm, was caught at York.*

The active and intelligent criminal had but little to fear in those days—his main difficulty must have been the lack of suitable material to steal. Except, possibly, in the towns† the hue and cry seems to be singularly inefficient, for the roll discloses the fact that in almost all cases of robbery the robbers were unknown. The principal danger he ran was that of being caught in the act, when his career of crime would be speedily and effectively terminated, hanging and not decapitation being the usual local method of doing this. The risk of such a fate was but slight,‡ and it may be of interest to study the machinery which is brought into motion. The person robbed must immediately raise the hue and cry in the four neighbouring townships, and in addition he must inform the serjeant of the ward (352). In the old days when wealth was largely represented by flocks the tracking of the stolen animals could be effectively done by the hue and cry, but it is evident that, despite the many fines inflicted by the justices on defaulting townships, it was singularly ineffective in capturing criminals, and its main use was to prevent false accusations of crime being brought against innocent persons, for the failure to raise the hue and cry at the earliest possible moment was a not uncommon defence (60).§

* For the distinction between the lesser and greater sanctuary see infra, xxi., and the "Archæological Journal." The question of abjuration is dealt with very fully in "Revue Historique," vol. 50, p. 1.

† In the roll the comparatively small amount of crime in the towns is noticeable, and is possibly due to more effective police arrangements than in the scattered townships.

‡ Table I. discloses the fact that of the 29 cases of robbery recorded by way of presentment, in only two cases were the offenders hung; and of the remainder all escaped, though three took sanctuary and abjured the realm. The appeals of robbery and wounding are made against persons who are not criminals; the action of trespass was then only in its infancy, and an appeal was one of the usual methods of bringing such questions before the court (Pollock and Maitland, ii., 526).

§ The necessity for the issue of the writ of 1252 as to watch and ward ("Select Charters," 370) indicates that the hue and cry at this period was not working satisfactorily.

To the criminal this somewhat cumbrous method of pursuit would not cause much alarm; still, if the pursuit was hot, the nearest church was always a place of temporary safety. Once there the church had to be watched by the four neighbouring townships to prevent his escape until, in the presence of the coroner, he abjured the realm, took his way to the nearest port, and left in all probability for Scotland. On the other hand, if time permitted, the criminal by crossing the Tyne or Tees was beyond the reach of the palatinate courts,* whilst greater security could be obtained by taking refuge in the greater sanctuaries of Hexham and Ripon, where, under certain conditions and within certain limits, he could dwell in peace without having to abjure the realm, as he would have to do in the case of the ordinary church.† Should the criminal be taken he will, if not caught red-handed, be imprisoned until he can find securities who will undertake to produce him when required, unless meanwhile he has made good his escape, as is not at all improbable. He ought to appear before the county court, where his crime should be duly presented by the four townships.‡ The power of the county court§ to deal with a case seems to be limited: they can acquit,‖ but

* Lapsley, op. cit., 252. Case 63 should be noted, where the robbers were captured beyond the river Tees, which formed the southern boundary of the palatinate.

† "Archæological Journal." It should be noted that the greater sanctuary of Durham Cathedral was not available to offenders guilty of crimes within the palatinate—they had broken the Bishop's peace (Lapsley, op. cit., 253; "Sanctuar. Dunelm.," Surtees Soc., passim).

‡ The roll does not disclose any procedure at a hundred court. Durham was not divided into hundreds, but into four wards, Chester, Easington, Darlington, and Stockton (Cal. Close Rolls, 1237, p. 567), in addition to Sadberge, which is treated as a separate county. The halmote courts of the Bishop, held (at a later date) three times a year, may be said to correspond to the hundred courts in other districts.

§ The county court for Sadberge seems to be indifferently referred to as comitatus and wapentagium (17, 41, 160). The Durham county court was held every fortnight (Modern Rep.) and not every month. The reference to the fuller county court in case 119 should be noted.

‖ Case 94. The acquittal did not absolve the defendant from appearing before the justices.

cannot convict. If, however, the criminal has fled, steps will be taken to have him outlawed: he will be duly exacted at the necessary number of courts and his property seized unless he appears, which in fact he never seems to do. At the eyre the crime will be duly presented by the twelve jurors,* the four townships,† and the serjeant. The prisoner, if present, may put himself‡ upon the verdict of the twelve jurors and the four townships.§ Even in the event of a conviction the prisoner's position, though desperate, is not quite hopeless, for he can turn approver and fight his way to safety by ridding the world of a certain number of his associates. So far as the eyre is concerned the mere acquittal or conviction of the prisoner is a comparatively minor matter. Careful inquiry has to be made into the conduct of all persons and communities concerned in the affair. Has the crime been duly presented at the county court? Did the various townships assist in the hue and cry? Were all necessary parties "attached" so as to secure their presence before the judges? Are such persons present, or, if dead, are they properly essoined or excused? Any failure is duly noted and a fine exacted, and, if we remember that the circumstances of every crime during the past seven years had to be accurately stated, we can well understand the dread with which the county regarded the visit every seventh year of these travelling commissioners of taxes, as the justices in eyre have well been called.‖ The men of Gilesgate were doubtless well advised when they paid (291) the comparatively large sum of 60 shillings per sic quod

* This will be done in writing (65).

† That the townships made their presentment verbally appears from case 307.

‡ The roll does not contain a case in which the prisoner declines to plead.

§ It is not safe to rely too much on the actual wording of the entries on the roll; the clerk who wrote it seems to use technical expressions somewhat loosely at times. In many cases (e.g., 36, 131) only jurors are mentioned, in others the expression "super patriam" is used, and from case 212 it would appear that this is equivalent to jurors. There is no case where the verdict of the four townships is taken. The expression "per fideles homines" in case 288 should be noted.

non occasionentur—evidently their consciences, or memories, were not quite clear.

The successful plea of drunkenness as a defence (in case 352) to a charge of theft is interesting and the result somewhat startling to our ideas—acquittal of the prisoner, although the jury convict her of the theft, whilst the luckless owner of the stolen goods is fined for failing to report the fact of drunkenness to the serjeant.

Of the non-criminal proceedings those relating to the high-handed action of the Burgesses of Durham in claiming that they alone had the right of buying and selling between the rivers Tyne and Tees are the most interesting. It is not as though they attempted to enforce this prohibition against persons little likely to resist, but they seize the property of the men of Robert fitz Meldred, who was not only the presiding judge, but also one of the most powerful men in the Bishopric. Unfortunately there is no record of the decision.

The many cases of drowning, especially in the river Tees, indicate the difficulties and dangers of travelling when bridges were but rare, whilst in case 202 we have, it is believed, not only the first recorded colliery accident, but also the first authentic record of the working of coal in the county.

Whilst the Eyre roll indicates the working of the administrative machinery of the Palatine, the Sadberge roll shews the routine working of the court of that area, when it was still treated as a separate county. Taking into consideration the smallness of the area and the paucity of population, the comparatively large number of cases entered on the roll shews that the taste for litigation in the early part of the thirteenth century was somewhat highly developed in Sadberge. At the head of the roll four justices are named, of whom three, Robert fitz Meldred, John of Rumsey, and Geofferey fitz Geoffrey, we have already met with in the Eyre roll, whilst the fourth, Jordan Heron, was a member of a well-known Bishopric family and a judge of considerable standing.* It is of interest to note that in case 492 judgment is deferred as only two justices are present. In Table II. the dates and sittings of the court are tabulated. Except in the cases where the place is mentioned there is nothing to indicate whether the sittings were at Durham or at Sadberge, though from the entry by mistake of a Durham case (449) on the Sadberge roll it would appear that Durham and Sadberge cases were dealt with at one and the same sitting of the court, and if this was so the court would generally sit at Durham, with possibly occasional sessions at Sadberge.

* Surtees' "Hist. Durham," iii., 287, Raine's "N. Durham," 304, "Feodarium," 231, where he states that he acted as a judge in the time of Bishop Philip of Poitou (1197—1208).

Though it is somewhat difficult to come to any definite conclusion from the comparatively few cases entered on the roll, it appears that the thirteenth-century litigant in Sadberge found an armoury of writs and assizes at his disposal very similar, if not identical, with those available outside the palatinate. In addition to the somewhat old-fashioned writ of right, there are cases of dower (377, 457), novel disseisin (380, 452), mort d'ancestor (378, 453, 454, 455, 456, 462, 484), quare levavit murum (375, 376), quare exaltavit stagnum (379, 450), quo jure (388, 451), quod capiat homagium (467), and entry (458, 463)—a fairly comprehensive list for so small a district. Doubtless the great Martin de Pateshull's visit to the palatinate in 1227 would have a stimulating effect on the clerks of the Bishop's chancery, and cause them to overhaul their register of writs.*

The long-drawn-out proceedings under the writ of right, with all their stringent formalities and many adjournments, are illustrated in the case between the Carew and Clare families over land at Seaton Carew. On ten occasions does it come before the court during the year in question, and though we see the conclusion of the case, we do not know when it began. At the hearing on the 11th February 1236 (492), the care necessary in stating the case is well illustrated, the plaintiff's attorney being attacked for his omission to state the year and day on which Henry I. was living and dead when tracing the plaintiff's title. The omission nearly proved fatal, but in the end the plaintiff succeeded. In strong contrast with these dilatory proceedings is the rapidity of the new possessory assizes. The Hurworth Common case of novel disseisin is disposed of summarily at a single sitting; the jurors merely state that Nicholas has been disseised by Nicholas and Richard and their respective wives, and the case is at an end except for the inevitable fines on the unsuccessful parties.

Though at first sight the two rolls here printed may appear to be mere records of crime and litigation, they will, I think, be found of considerable interest in shewing the remarkable way in which the legal and administrative machinery of the palatinate developed during the first half of the thirteenth century.

In conclusion, I have to express my thanks to Mr. H. H. E. Craster, who first drew my attention to these rolls; to Miss Cox and Miss Grogan for transcribing; to Mr. Hamilton Thompson for the very great assistance he gave me with text; and to our Secretary for much kindly help.

The Editor must crave the reader's kind indulgence for the efforts of a novice—what his fate would have been at the hands of the justices of the 1242 eyre, with their painfully high sense of duty, he trembles to think.

DESCRIPTION OF ROLLS.

Roll 223.

This roll consists of six membranes 7 inches wide, but of varying lengths. They are joined together in Exchequer fashion. The first membrane is 19 inches long, the second 17¼, the third nearly 24, the fourth 23, the fifth 22, and the sixth 19½ inches long. They are stitched together at the top in Exchequer fashion. It is evident that at some time membranes 5 and 6 have been transposed, the latter containing entries relating to Chester Ward, in continuation of those on membrane 4, whilst the very worn condition of the dorse of membrane 5, and the endorsements on it mentioned below, indicate that the change is of comparatively recent origin.

On the face of membrane 1 the entries are regularly made, with slight gaps after cases 3 and 4. On the dorse the entries are not so regular, intervals of about an inch being left after cases 33, 38 and 40, and one of 2 inches after case 47.

Except the Sadberge entries (68—71), which are rather crowded, and a 3-inch interval after case 64, the entries on membrane 2 are regularly written.

Membrane 3 calls for no comment except ½-inch intervals after cases 119 and 122, and 3 inches after 139.

The entries on membrane 4 are regularly written, but those at the end of the dorse are badly rubbed.

As has been mentioned above, membrane 5 was formerly the outer skin of the roll. With the exception of the last case (292) on the face the entries are regularly entered. Case 292 would appear to have nothing to do with the eyre; the writing is crowded, and does not appear to have been made at the same time as the other entries. There are a few entries neatly written at the top of the dorse. Near the bottom, "Durham Reg., No. 2," is written in a recent hand, and then below it, in a fifteenth-century hand, "processus Justiciariorum Itinerantium tempore Hugonis Episcopi .... et in .... processum .... hoi .... de Hertipole." "Hugonis" has been crossed out and "Nicholai" inserted in a later hand.

The entries on membrane 6 are regularly made.

The roll is incomplete, as there are no entries relating to the Stockton Ward.

Roll 224.

This roll consists also of six membranes, but the last three are joined together in Chancery fashion, so that the roll appears to consist of only four sheets joined in Exchequer fashion.

Membrane 1 is 8 inches wide and 23 long. The entries are fairly and regularly entered on the face. On the dorse (record of attorneys) they only occupy some 6 inches. The sizes of the other membranes are 2, 7½ by 14½; 3, 8½ by 21½; 4, 9¼ by 18¼; 5, 7¾ by 19; and 6, 9¾ by 25½. The entries are in all cases fairly and regularly written on the face; there is nothing on the dorse except the endorsement printed at the end of the roll. From the nature of the entries on the second membrane it seems doubtful if it originally formed part of the roll.

Et idem Michael Prior venit et facit attornatum suum de Reginaldo de Herterpol canonico uel de Willelmo de Polano, Ita quod alter eorum locum teneat, si alter eorum interesse non poterit.

(486.) Die martis sequente profert se Radulfus Damundeuille contra Plesenciam que fuit vxor Thome de Aslacby. Et Plesencia venit, et per licenciam Justiciariorum concordati sunt, Ita scilicet quod dictus Radulfus coram Justiciariis recepit homagium dicte Plesencie de manerio de Trefford cum pertinenciis.

(487.) Thomas Karrov sequitur per breve suum de precipe uersus Auiciam de Clare; et Johannes Burdone et Laurencius de Lasceles, atornati dicte Amicie essoniati sunt et habent diem vsque diem lune proximam post Octabas Pasche. Et tentus est visus per seruientem et liberos homines. Et Johannes de Bulemer venit et ponit clamum suum in predicta terra.

(488.) Ricardus Erchembaud et Nicholaus socius suus, atornati Warini de Monte Canensi et Dyonisie vxoris eius, secuntur per breve suum de dote uersus Symonem de Langetone, Archidiaconum Cantuariensem. Et ad instanciam domini Regis et per breve eiusdem ponitur loquela ista in respectu a die lune in crastino Pasche vsque in vnum mensem; et testatum est per Silvestrum, ballivum de wapentagio, quod tercia pars manerii de Sumerhuse capta fuit in manu episcopi die Sabbati proxima ante festum Sancti Nicholai, et hoc testatum est per Willelmum de Londoniis, Ricardum de Oxenhale, Henricum de Greystane et Willelmum de Stringham.

(492.) Thomas Karrov per breve suum de precipe sequitur versus Auiciam de Clare de duabus partibus duarum carucatarum terre cum pertinenciis, excepta vna bouata terre in Oueton. Et Auicia venit. Et dictus Thomas loquitur uersus ipsam Auiciam per Walterum de Egglescliue, et dicit quod ipse Auicia deforciat ei iniuste duas partes duarum carucatarum terre cum pertinenciis in Oueton, excepta vna bouata terre, quas clamat pertinere ad liberum tenementum suum quod tenet de Episcopo in capite in Setone. Et ideo iniuste, quia Robertus Karrov de eadem terra fuit seisitus tempore Henrici Regis, aui Regis Henrici aui Henrici Regis qui nunc est, et expleta inde recepta de blado et pratis ad valenciam xx s. tempore pacis. Et de ipso Roberto descendit Jus ipsius terre Petro filio suo et heredi, et de ipso Petro Waltero filio suo et heredi; et de ipso Waltero descendit ius eiusdem terre isti Thome Karrov petenti, filio et heredi ipsius Walteri; et hoc offert ad disracionandum. Contra per Willelmum Kerre, qui respondet pro ipsa Auicia et petit a dicto Thoma vtrum . . . . hoc quod Waterus pro eo narrauit annon; et Thomas dicit quod bene warantizat narracionem dicti Walteri. Et dictus Willelmus pro predicta Auicia petit Judicium si debeat respondere . . . . non nominauit annum neque diem quo dictus Henricus rex auus aui istius Henrici Regis fuit viuus et mortuus. Et predictus Walterus pro predicto Thoma dicit quod ad huc est in eodem loco quo prius fuerat, et adiecit annum et diem; et dicit quod sufficit in narracioni sue hoc quod nominauit tempore pacis, eo quod tempus pacis non fuit temporibus suis nisi in vltimo anno suo. Contra per ipsum Willelmum, qui dicit quod, licet sit in eodem loco quo prius fuit, nichil ad narracionem potest aumentare, quia cum interogatum fuerat a Thoma Karrov vtrum narracionem suam warantizat annon, et . . . . Thomas sine aliqua aumentatione ipsam warantiam non potest nec debet, ut videtur, ei postmodum aumentare. Vnde Judicium ponitur in respectu, quia non sunt nisi duo Justiciarii presentes, vsque diem lune proxima post octabas Sancti Mathie apostoli. Et dicta Auicia dicit quod personaliter uult prosequi loquelam istam decetero, et petit quod atornati sui deleantur; et concessum est ei.

(493.) Walterus de Hadham et Hauisia vxor eius, Ricardus de Yelande et Matylda vxor eius secuntur per breve suum uersus Auiciam de Clare, conquerentes quod ipsa Auicia deforciat eis duas partes duarum carucatarum terre cum pertinenciis, excepta vna bouata terre, que eos contingunt de hereditate que fuit Thome de Wiltone in Oueton, cuius heredes sunt predicte Hauisia et Matylda: qui nuper [o]biit, vt dicitur. Dicta Auicia venit, et habent diem ad diem lune proximam post Octabas Sancti Mathie apostoli.

Placita Assisarum Dunelmi Die Lune proxima post Octabas Sancti Mathie Apostoli, Anno viij.

(494.) Thomas Karrov sequitur per breve suum uersus Auiciam de Clare. Et ipsa Auicia essoniata est, et habent diem vsque in crastinum clausi Pasche.

(495.) Walterus de Hadham pro se et Hauisia vxor eius, Ricardus de Yelande pro se et pro Matylda vxore sua, secuntur uersus Auiciam de Clare. Et ipsa Auicia essoniata est et habet diem sicut prius.

Placita de Assisis die Lune proxima post clausum Pasche, Anno viij°.

(497.) Thomas Karrov sequitur uersus Auiciam de Clare, petens recordum suum et Judicium audiendum. Et ipsa Auicia venit et petit recordum suum et Judicium audiendum; et cum petitum sit a dicta Auicia si uelit lucrare et perdere per responsum predictum, consulta super hoc uenit et petit adhuc uisum terre, quia uisus inde factus minus sufficiens fuit. Ideo habent diem visus die Mercurii proxima ante festum Sancti Georgii et diem placiti usque in tres septimanas; et sunt tales ueatores nominati: Willelmus de Hessewelle, Henricus Spring, Radulfus de Holinside, Walterus super teysam, Rolandus barde, Rogerus de garmandeway, Robertus de Aslakeby, Walterus filius Abel, Reginaldus clericus, Galfridus filius Nigelli, Stephanus de Gartone, Robertus de Daltone; et dicta Auicia facit attornatum suum in tergo rotuli de essoniis, et Thomas Karrov similiter.

(498.) Loquela inter Walterum de Hadham et Hauisiam vxorem eius, Ricardum de Yelande et Matildam vxorem suam, petentes, et Auiciam de Clare, tenentem, tenetur in respectu.

(499.) Walterus Surteys, attornatus Radulfi Surteys, sequitur uersus Johannem de Coyners per breve suum de quo iure de mora de Ditensale. Et J. Gyllet, clericus, atornatus dicti Johannis, venit, et concor-dati sunt per licenciam in hac forma. Videlicet quod idem Johannes recognovit dictam moram esse ius et clamium ipsius Radulfi. Et dictus Radulfus dimisit et concessit eidem Johanni et heredibus suis et hominibus suis de Sockeburne inperpetuum communam pasturam eiusdem more de Ditonsale ab ingressu more per viam de Sockeburne vsque ad montem qui vocatur Staynhov. Et ipsam pasturam dicto Johanni et heredibus suis et hominibus suis de Sockeburne contra omnes homines ipse Radulfus et heredes sui inperpetuum warantizabunt contra omnes alias villatas vicinas, Ita quod predicta mora communus remanebit Inter villam de Ditonsale et Sockeburne. Et pro hac recognicione et concessione remisit dictus Johannes dicto Radulfo et heredibus suis inperpetuum totum Jus et clamum quod habauit in quadam cultura quam Galfridus de Koyners, pater ipsius Johannis, emit de Ricardo Surteyse, fratre dicti Radulfi, Exceptis septem acris de eadem cultura per perticam xx pedum, que inperpetuum remanebunt in dominico dicto Johanni et heredibus suis, propinquiores terre ipsius Johannis de Sockeburne. Et predictus Radulfus et heredes sui ipsas septem acras terre predicto Johanni et heredibus suis inperpetuum warantizabunt.

(500.) Ricardus Erchembaud, attornatus Warini de Munchenese et Dionisie vxoris sue, profert se contra Magistrum Simonem, Archidiaconum Cantuariensem. Et ad Instanciam domini Regis et mandatum dicti Warini habent diem in eodem statu quo nunc est a die Sancti Johannis Babtiste in tres septimanas.

(501.) Wido de Hotone, atornatus Thome Karrov, profert se uersus Aviciam de Clare, et prece eius et amicorum dicte Avicie, ponitur in respectu vsque in vnum mensem. Et Willelmus de Hessewelle, Ricardus de Hollinside, Reginaldus clericus, Galfridus filius Nigelli, Walterus filius Abelle, Roulandus baard, veatores, et testantur visum sicut facta fuit Die Mercurii proxima ante festum Sancti Georgii apud Ouetone.

Placita Assisarum Sadbergie Die Lune in crastino Sancte Trinitatis.

(502.) Thomas Karrov sequitur per breve suum uersus Auiciam de Clare. Et Jordanus Janitor, atornatus dicte Auicie, profert se. Et Thomas Karrov per Walterum de Egglescliue loquitur uersus ipsam Aviciam, dicens quod ipsa deforciat ei iniuste duas partes duarum carucatarum terre cum pertinenciis in Oueton, excepta vna bouata terre, quas clamat pertinere ad liberum tenementum suum quod tenet in capite de domino Episcopo in Setone. Et ideo iniuste quod Robertus Karrov de eadem terra fuit vestitus et seisitus ut de feodo et de iure tempore pacis anno et die quo Henricus Rex, auus Henrici Regis aui istius Henrici Regis qui nunc est, fuit viuus et mortuus, et expleta inde recepta ad valenciam xx s. Et de ipso Roberto descendit ius eiusdem terre Petro filio suo et heredi. Et de ipso Petro Waltero filio suo; et de ipso Waltero descendit ius eiusdem terre isti Thome petenti, filio et heredi. Et si tale fuerit quod hoc contradicere uoluerit, habet inde sufficientem disracionem. Contra per W. Heyrun, qui pro Jordano Janitore, atornato dicte Auicie, respondet et defendit ius dicti Thome in ipsa terra, et dicit quod adhuc petit Judicium de hoc quod prius narrauerat sicut die lune proxima post Octabas purificacionis, ad quem diem narrando non nominauit annum neque diem quo Henricus rex, auus aui istius Regis, fuit viuus et mortuus, et adhuc inde petit Judicium. Contra pro parte aduersa, qui dicit quod cum petitum esset a dicta Avicia die lune proxima post clausum Pasche si vellet per ipsum responsum lucrare uel perdere, Ipsa super hoc consulta alterum intrauit responsum et petiebat visum terre, asserens quod visus inde factus minus sufficiens erat; et postmodum facta fuit visus de eadem terra per liberos prescriptos. Ad hoc replicat dictus W. Heyrun, dicens quod licet inde visum petiebat, adiecit, ut dicit, quod excepcio prius proposita de anno et die ei saluaretur; et Walterus dicit quod excepcionem predictam omnino reliquid et precise capitali placito respondit, quando vltimo petiit visum terre. Recordum et Judicium de hoc pro absencia sua ponitur in respectu vsque in Vigiliam Nativitatis sancti Johannis Baptiste.

Placita assisarum Die Lune In crastino Apostolorum Petri et Pauli, Anno viij.

(504.) Thomas Karrov per breve suum de precipe sequitur uersus Aviciam de Clare, et Jordanus Janitor, atornatus dicte Auicie, venit. Et Nigellus de Rungeton pro Thoma Karrov loquitur uersus dictum Jordanum, dicens quod deforciat dicto Thome duas partes manerii de Oueton, excepta vna bouata; et dictus Jordanus venit et recognouit dictam terram cum pertinenciis esse Jus et clamium dicti Thome et eam ei reddidit coram Justiciariis. ‡ Walter de Burghdon was a man of some importance in Scotland at this time. He probably came from Burradon, a township in the parish of Alwinton, not far from Rothbury. Walter de Rothebery is one of the witnesses. He was sheriff of Perth in 1295-6 (Bain's Calendar of Documents relating to Scotland, i., 264). On Aug. 28, 1296, he, as a Roxburghshire landowner, paid homage to Edward I. at Berwick, when he bore a cinquefoil on his seal (Ibid., p. 199). In 1301 and 1302 he was in command of Carstairs Castle, and sheriff of Lanark. His signet bore a lion (Ibid., pp. 317, 336). In 1305 he occurs as a justice in Galloway, in company with Sir Roger Kirkpatrick (Ibid., p. 457). Three years later he and Odard Heron were sureties for the good behaviour of William Olyfart, a Scotchman, who had been made prisoner at Stirling (Ibid., ii., 8). DOCUMENTS

FROM THE REGISTERS OF

HENRY BOWET,

LORD ARCHBISHOP OF YORK,

7 Oct. 1407—20 Oct. 1423,

AND

CARDINAL-PRIEST OF SANTA BALBINA,

LORD ARCHBISHOP OF YORK,

20 July 1425—21 July 1452.

INTRODUCTION.

THE documents which follow, selected from the registers of archbishops Bowet and Kempe, form an interesting if incomplete record of their primary visitations of their huge diocese, and of a few other visitations exercised by them. They are arranged chronologically, as far as possible, and consist of the following varieties: (1) Preliminary notices sent to the various archdeacons or to persons responsible for their execution. (2) Schedules appended to the said notices, containing a detailed programme or diarium of the visitation announced in them. (3) Preliminary notices to convents of religious persons within the archbishops' jurisdiction. (4) Notices to convents of orders exempt from their jurisdiction, requiring procurations in the form of food and entertainment, which were exacted as a matter of form during the primary visitation of a diocesan. (5) Certificates of the receipt and execution of preliminary mandates by the persons addressed. (6) Records of the process of visitation. (7) Detecta presented to the visitor by the persons cited or examined during such process. To these are added a few other pertinent documents, such as a bull authorising archbishop Kempe to exercise his visitation by commission, and commissions issued by himself and his predecessor. Finally, as an appendix illustrating the visitations of the dean and chapter of York by both archbishops, is given the text of the composition made in 1328, by which such visitations were permanently regulated, from a collation of the copy at the end of Kempe's register with the original copy in that of archbishop Melton.

Of the first four classes, (1), (2) and (4) are modelled upon common forms, and, instead of repeating these again and again, one complete specimen of each form has been given, and any important variations upon it, which occur in similar documents, have been noted in their proper place. Of class (2), Bowet's schedules for all the archdeaconries of the diocese, except that of Richmond, in 1409 and 1410, and Kempe's schedules for the whole diocese in 1440-2, remain. Kempe's schedules for Richmond archdeaconry in 1428, and for the diocese of Durham in 1437-9, form additions to these of some value. Such detailed documents are extremely rare in episcopal registers, although it is frequently possible to recover their bare outlines by a careful collection of the dates appended to documents issued while a bishop was engaged in the work of visitation. The primary object of an episcopal register was to preserve the common forms upon which the extensive correspondence of a diocesan chancery was conducted, together with such necessary records of business as had to be preserved for future reference. In this particular instance, the schedules were copied into the registers, not for the benefit of future historians, but for the guidance of the clerks to whom the composition of similar documents should be entrusted in the future. As Kempe's schedules shew a somewhat better arrangement than Bowet's, and as no others have been preserved in later registers, at any rate for the next century and for some time later, it is to be presumed that they formed the model upon which visitations of the diocese were conducted for some time to come.

Of classes (5), (6) and (7), much less remains. From a historical point of view (6) and (7) are most interesting. From the registrar's standpoint, they had little utilitarian value. The actual records of visitations were preserved in separate books, such as those few which by a fortunate chance have escaped destruction at Lincoln. The circumstances which prompted the inclusion of certain processes of visitation and detecta in Bowet's and Kempe's registers are easily explained. The districts or bodies which they concern are some of those in which the archbishops' jurisdiction as diocesans or metropolitans was subject to dispute or definite limitation. The chapters of York and Beverley and the archdeaconry of Richmond were republics within the diocese, in which the slightest infringement of privilege by the archbishop might lead, as in the case of Alexander Nevill's autocratic behaviour at Beverley in 1381, to endless quarrels and litigations. Even more delicate was the question of the archbishop's jurisdiction in the diocese of Durham, and especially in the cathedral priory. It was therefore desirable to preserve some record of visitations actually exercised on such debateable ground. With regard to the diocese of York generally, no such record was necessary; and the detecta obtained from individual parishes or monasteries, although they were doubtless recorded separately at the time, were not of such permanent importance as to be copied into the official register. The inclusion of fair copies of injunctions delivered to monasteries depended much upon the taste of the registrar. Neither Bowet's nor Kempe's registrar appears to have valued their preservation, and they were apparently allowed to remain in a more perishable form. It is noteworthy that, while a large number of injunctions were recorded in full in the registers of two of Kempe's contemporaries at Lincoln, bishops Flemyng and Gray, the injunctions of their successor, William Alnwick, exist only in a rough copy on paper, and his register contains only one scanty set of injunctions relating to Bardney abbey.

To attempt biographies of archbishops Bowet and Kempe in this place would be too long a task. It is sufficient to say that Henry Bowet, archdeacon of Lincoln from 1386, was consecrated bishop of Bath and Wells by archbishop Arundel in St. Paul's cathedral, 20 Nov. 1401.* He was translated to the see of York by papal bull on 7 Oct. 1407, the temporalities being restored to him on 1 Dec. following,† after the long vacancy following the execution of archbishop Scrope. He ruled the see for just over sixteen years, dying on 20 Oct. 1423.‡ His death was followed by a vacancy of nearly two years. On 15 Feb. 1423-4, Richard Flemyng, bishop of Lincoln, a consistent supporter of the papacy at the council of Siena, was provided to the archbishopric.* The chapter of York, however, had elected Philip Morgan, bishop of Worcester, upon a congé d'elire issued on 16 November, 1423.† Flemyng was unable to obtain the execution of his bull without incurring the penalties of præmunire, and the deadlock which ensued was ended by the consent of the Crown to the re-translation of Flemyng to Lincoln and the concurrent translation of John Kempe, bishop of London, to York. The necessary bulls were issued on 20 July, 1425,‡ from which date, as the internal evidence of Kempe's register proves, his pontifical years at York were reckoned. Curiously enough, however, the entry at the beginning of his register gives 1426 as the year of his translation instead of 1425. This mistake was copied, doubtless from the register, by the author of the continuation of Stubbs' chronicle, and has found its way, so far as the present writer has observed, into everything that has been written about the archbishop.

John Kempe, previously archdeacon of Durham for a short time, was consecrated bishop of Rochester in 1419, probably at Rouen on 3 December.§ He was translated to Chichester by bull, 28 Feb. 1420-1,‖ and from Chichester to London on 17 Nov. 1421.¶ He remained at York for twenty-seven years from 1425, was translated to Canterbury on 21 July, 1452, and died on 22 March, 1453-4. From 1426 to 1432, and from 1450 to 1454, he held the high office of chancellor of England, and in 1438 he received the cardinalate from pope Eugenius IV. His life belongs rather to the history of England than to that of the see of York; but it is evident from the documents which follow that he attempted seriously to fulfil his often interrupted duties as archbishop. The gate-house of Cawood castle is an abiding memorial of his residence in his diocese. Moreover, he surrounded himself and filled the dignities of his cathedral church with an exceptionally able staff of clerks. The activities of William Felter, John Bernyngham, and John Marchall receive illustration in these pages; while the documents printed in Testamenta Eboracensia prove the amity and mutual good-fellowship which existed between them.

The notices of Bowet's primary visitation of his diocese occur in various parts of his register, among the documents relating to the various chapters, archdeaconries, and spiritualities with which they are concerned. There are no details of his visitation of the archdeaconry of Richmond, of the chapters of Ripon and Southwell, or of his jurisdiction of Hexhamshire. Otherwise, his programme remains in full. His intention was to perform the visitation in person: the only part left to a commissary was the examination of business regarding the outlying fragment of the diocese in Gloucestershire. The earliest notice, addressed to the dean of the Christianity of York, was despatched from Cawood castle on 12 March, 1408-9. Those intended for the archdeacon of York, the religious houses in that archdeaconry which the archbishop proposed to visit, and the exempt houses from which he demanded hospitality by way of a procuration were issued on 15 March. The similar notices for the archdeaconry of Nottingham bear date 10 May, the day before the archbishop was advertised to begin his visitation of the city of York.

According to the programme, this part of the visitation occupied three days, beginning on Saturday, 11 May, and ending on Tuesday, the 14th. Nothing was done upon the intervening Sunday, and there is no indication that Bowet visited St. Mary's abbey. The clergy of the churches belonging to the peculiar of the dean and chapter were exempt from visitation, but the parishioners, at any rate, were expected to attend. After his visitation of the York parishes, the archbishop waited for two days, until the feast of the Ascension was past. On the morrow of that festival, he entered upon his visitation of the deanery of Ainsty at Aberford. The various stages of his progress may be traced in the text, and need not be detailed here. Its western limit for the time being was Kirkstall abbey, where he spent the Sunday after Ascension day with his whole household. From Drax he returned to spend Whitsuntide at Cawood, and during this interval issued his notices to the guardians of the spiritualities of Howden and Howdenshire, Snaith, and Selby. On Monday, 3 June, he resumed his progress at Selby abbey. Journeying through the deanery of Pontefract, he reached his peculiar jurisdiction of Otley on the 7th, and from the 8th to the 11th occupied himself with the deanery of Craven. His most westerly point was Skipton, and he appears to have made no arrangement which included the remote parishes of Bolton-by-Bowland—although to this there is a doubtful reference—and Slaidburn, on the borders of Lancashire. Between the 12th and 15th he concluded his visitation of Pontefract deanery, spending the 14th and 15th at St. Oswald's priory. On the 16th he visited Monkbretton priory, and began the visitation of the deanery of Doncaster on the 17th. This was finished at Hatfield on the 25th. Sunday, the 23rd, was a day of rest, spent in the exempt monastery of Roche: otherwise, every day was occupied with the business in hand. The work was somewhat lightened by making Rotherham and Doncaster centres of visitation for two days respectively. The last three days, however, in view of the archbishop's subsequent movements, were awkwardly arranged. From Roche he visited Tickhill on the 24th. The Nottingham visitations were timed to begin at Scrooby on the 26th, so that, to hold the concluding session at Hatfield on the 25th, a deviation from the direct route was necessary. Moreover, the Hatfield arrangements were inconvenient for some of the parishes concerned. Doncaster would have been a more appropriate centre for the clergy and lay representatives of Hemsworth and Kirk Smeaton. The same inconvenience, however, is noticeable in the case of the parishes visited at Tickhill; and it is probable that the clerks who mapped out the scheme consulted the apportionment of the daily procurations due to the archbishop, without much regard to the geographical fitness of their plan.

On the 26th the archbishop proceeded to visit the deanery of Retford. His stay at the exempt house of Mattersey on 27 June was made the occasion for a visitation of the vicarages in those parts which belonged to the chapter of St. Sepulchre's chapel at York; but on the 29th and 30th he rested for entertainment at the abbeys of Welbeck and Rufford. On 2 July he finished with Retford deanery. From the 3rd to the 5th he visited the parishes of Newark deanery, spending the 4th and 5th at Newark. The next two days were spent in visiting Thurgarton priory; and the deanery of Bingham occupied the inside of the following week, two days being devoted to Bingham and two to Ruddington. On Sunday, 14 July, the archbishop was at Lenton priory. He began his visitation of Nottingham deanery in St. Mary's at Nottingham on the 15th, where he also summoned the clergy and layfolk of certain parishes, hitherto omitted, of Bingham deanery. On the 18th he visited Newstead priory with some of the adjacent parishes, and, on the 19th, Felley priory; and, on 20 July, he concluded his visitation of the archdeaconry at Worksop priory. From this point he probably returned to Scrooby or Cawood for the following Sunday. On Tuesday, 23 July, he visited the spirituality of Snaith. Next day he was at Howden, and spent the rest of the week in visiting that spirituality at three other centres. A round of visitations which had lasted almost continuously for eight weeks was concluded with the spirituality of Selby on Monday, 29 July.

A long and systematic visitation of the East Riding, for which the notices were sent out on 3 August, was begun, after an interval of eight weeks, at Kirkham priory, on Monday, 23 September. This visitation lasted over six weeks, till 5 November, and the average number of parishes summoned to the daily sessions was small compared with the average for the archdeaconries of York and Nottingham. The parishes of the small deanery of Buckrose occupied four days, from 24 to 27 September. Dickering deanery was spread over ten days, from 28 September to 7 October, one day each being allotted to the churches and vicarages of Scarborough, Hunmanby, and Bridlington, two days to Bridlington priory, while Hunmanby was made a centre for two days. Ten more days, from 8 to 17 October, were spent in the deanery of Holderness. Of these, however, Sunday, the 13th, was a day of repose at Meaux abbey. On Friday, the 18th, the visitation of Harthill deanery was begun at Hull. The archbishop was at Cottingham on the 19th: on Sunday, the 20th, he was enthroned in Beverley minster, which he visited next day. On the 22nd he visited the Beverley parishes. The parishes of the provostry were not visited at any special centre, but were included at various centres with the other parishes of the deaneries of Harthill and Holderness. After leaving Beverley the archbishop visited Haltemprice and Ferriby priories. On the 25th he continued his parochial visitations at Ferriby, and on the 26th made his manor of Bishop Burton his centre. He then travelled through the north-eastern part of Harthill deanery, spending the feast of St. Simon and St. Jude at Watton. From Kirkburn, on 30 October, he turned westwards. All Saints' day and All Souls' day were spent in visitations at Warter. On 3 November he drew near York at Catton, from which he turned southward to Sutton-on-Derwent and, after receiving his procuration at Ellerton priory on 5 November, left the archdeaconry, apparently for Cawood.

It was not until the following 14 May, in 1410, that Bowet sent out notices to the archdeaconry of Cleveland and the spirituality of Northallerton and Allertonshire. The visitation was opened at Stillingfleet on 30 June, after which the archbishop journeyed northward through the deanery of Bulmer. Two days were allowed for Marton priory and three days for Newburgh. Another day was allotted to resting at Byland abbey, and Thirsk, the most northerly point of the deanery, was reached on 10 July. From the 11th to the 13th Northallerton was the centre of visitation for the parishes of the spirituality; but, after finishing there on the 13th, the archbishop opened his visitation of Cleveland deanery on the same day at Hutton Rudby. He appointed four days for Guisborough, one for the local parishes, and three for the priory, and visited Whitby abbey and parish church on 20 July. The visitation of Whitby abbey probably extended over more than a day, for it was not till the 23rd that the deanery of Ryedale was entered at Brompton in Pickering Lythe. Here proceedings were more expeditious, and the visitation, after four weeks all but a day, ended with a halt for entertainment at Malton priory.

Of Bowet's later visitations, the only detailed notices are the summons issued to the chapter of Beverley for 10 August, 1416, and the fuller documents relating to his visitation of the dean and chapter of York in June of the same year. The York documents are of special interest, as they illustrate the working of the composition between the archbishop and the chapter, which had received its final form in 1328. The full text of this famous composition, from the accurate copy at the end of archbishop Kempe's register, collated with the original copy in the register of archbishop Melton, will be found, as already stated, at the end of the documents included in this volume. It was the definitive form of an agreement arrived at between archbishop John le Romeyn and the dean and chapter of his day in 1290. This earlier composition appears to have afforded loop-holes for the infringement of the liberties of the chapter by the visitor; and, to quiet the consequent disputes between the archbishops and a republic jealous of its rights, pope John XXII. appointed bishop Ayerminne of Norwich and Hugh of Angoulême, archdeacon of Canterbury, commissaries to examine and approve a settlement. The archdeacon was unable to serve upon the commission, and the bishop confirmed the scheme which was submitted to him, after consultation, by the proctors of the contending parties. By this arrangement the archbishop was granted the right of visiting the chapter once every four years, instead of once in three years, as formerly. Most of the procedure appears clearly from the account of Bowet's visitation. His notice was sent out on 21 April, a full two months before the date appointed for the visitation, 22 June. On that day, at the accustomed hour of chapter, he entered the chapter-house, where the precentor, treasurer and five canons were present. After having delivered or listened to a sermon, he remained with three assessors and a clerk, not a notary public, and received the certificate acknowledging the receipt and execution of his summons. William Cawode, as proctor for the chapter, entered a formal protest on behalf of their liberties, which the archbishop on his side undertook to respect, according to common law and the terms of the composition. The actual visitation then followed. The procedure is not stated in full; but the composition required a general demand, to be made to the chapter in common, without any exaction of an oath or formal threat of penalties, as to matters which called for correction. After this the archbishop might examine the canons individually and in private, but without any penal injunction, and with the undertaking of his assessors and clerk, in presence of the chapter, to keep faithfully, in dictating and writing the evidence, to the actual words of each canon. The comperta and detecta thus obtained and written down were delivered to the chapter on the day following the visitation. The right of correcting them was reserved to the chapter, with the proviso that, if they failed to report their corrections within ten months, the archbishop might take the right into his own hands, not, however, without timely notice of his intention to the dean, or, in the dean's absence, to the senior canon in residence, nor without the advice of the chapter. At the same time, the right of depriving canons of their canonries and prebends was retained absolutely by the archbishop, as a complement to his power of collation. Further clauses of the composition exempted the chapter from the payment of procurations after the hundred shillings due at the first visitation, and reserved to them the privilege of exercising unimpeded visitation within their own peculiar jurisdiction.

The correction of the comperta was certified to Bowet on 2 April, 1417, between nine and ten months after his visitation. In the meantime, the deanery, which had been vacant in the previous June, had been filled by the election of Thomas Polton, afterwards bishop of Hereford and Worcester. He, however, was away from York at this time, and the chapter answered the archbishop in their own name. They appear to have corrected such defaults as related purely to their own property and the maintenance of order within the close; but those in which the liberties of the archbishop were of joint concern with their own were left to his correction in consultation with them, and with these was included the deliberation of measures to hasten the completion of the fabric of the minster. This certificate closes a series of documents which form an instructive addition to the constitutional history of the church of York.

The visitation documents in archbishop Kempe's register are collected in two portions of the volume. In ff. 210—213 are the notices of a visitation of the archdeaconry of Richmond, held in the late summer of 1428, followed by an interesting account of the proceedings of the first three days, with the depositions from various parishes. In pursuance of notices issued on 22 June, the visitation began at Goldsborough on 24 August. The most interesting depositions on this occasion related to dilapidations in the churches of Goldsborough and Knaresborough, the roofs and windows of which were sadly in need of repair. From Goldsborough the archbishop proceeded directly to St. Robert's at Knaresborough, where the minister and brethren met him with a plea for exemption from his visitation, alleging the authority of a papal bull. This bull, which apparently exempted the whole order of Trinitarians from episcopal jurisdiction, was said to be among the archives of the chief house of the order in France; and Kempe graciously adjourned his visitation till 1 September in the year following, to give time for the production of the original or of a copy. According to his preliminary programme, he spent the night at St. Robert's, and went on next day to Ripley. Here the depositions were of little importance, but complaints were made of the morals of the rector of Staveley. The archbishop was scheduled to pass the night at Fountains, and on 26 August he appeared at Wensley. In addition to the local clergy, there met him here the archdeacon of Richmond, and the abbots of the exempt houses of Coverham and Jervaulx, with whom he proposed to lodge on the nights of the 26th and 27th. The report of the petition which they presented on behalf of the clergy and people of the whole archdeaconry is somewhat obscurely and allusively worded. It appears, however, that Kempe had foregone his primary visitation of the rest of the diocese on account of the bad weather, which had imperilled the harvest and thereby prevented clergy and people from going far from home, and that he had accepted a composition from the other archdeaconries in lieu of the customary daily procurations. This the archdeacon and his associates prayed him to do in the present case, and, finding that he was prepared to listen to them, offered him a twentieth from the benefices of the archdeaconry by way of a subsidy, which he accepted. To safeguard his rights, however, in an archdeaconry over which his control, in the lifetime of the archdeacon, was little more than nominal, the archbishop made a formal assertion of his jurisdiction as diocesan and visitor, and, referring to the time-honoured agreement between the archbishops and the archdeacons of Richmond, declared that he had the right of visiting and receiving procurations from this archdeaconry, as often as he visited the rest of the diocese. He then dismissed the clergy and laity, charging them to lay their depositions before his commissaries. The information thus obtained discovered much neglect with regard to the chapel of West Witton, and an extraordinary state of things at Coverham, where the parishioners came armed to church, crowded the porch and quire, quarrelled in service, and did unauthorised legal business at the church door. No presentations are reported from other parts of the archdeaconry. Had Kempe completed his visitation, he would have been occupied continuously for four weeks until 22 September, when he was due at Brigham in the deanery of Coupland. The programme indicates that the exempt monasteries would have felt the burden of his progress heavily, as he proposed to spend a night and receive procurations in entertainment at the abbeys of Fountains, Coverham, Jervaulx, St. Agatha, Egglestone, Cockersand, Furness, Calder, and the priory of Hornby. He also expected hospitality at the priories of St. Martin's at Richmond, Conishead, Cartmel, and St. Bees, over which he had jurisdiction as ordinary. The most interesting item in his programme relates to 15 September, when, having concluded his visitation of the deanery of Amounderness at Kirkham, he intended to spend an idle day in crossing Morecambe bay to Conishead priory in the deanery of Furness. The archbishops of York seldom succeeded in visiting these distant parts of their vast diocese, and it is much to be regretted that on this occasion a visitation, of which the opening reports are so promising, was abandoned so early in its course.

As chancellor of England from 1426 to 1432, and as a leading statesman during the period which followed his resignation of the great seal, Kempe had little opportunity of carrying out a complete visitation of his diocese; and it was not until the fifteenth year of his tenure of the see of York that he managed to make arrangements for carrying out the long-deferred primary visitation. Meanwhile, on 20 November, 1437, the death of Thomas Langley, bishop of Durham, was chosen by him as an appropriate time to exercise his rights as metropolitan in the vacant see. He was unable to undertake this task in person, and, had he done so, it is possible that he might have met with the resistance so often shewn to his predecessors. He delegated his office on 10 December, 1437, to his clerk John Marchall or Marshall, then registrar of the court of York and canon of Wells, who was himself beneficed in the diocese of Durham as master of Sherburn hospital. The commissary appears to have issued his mandate to the prior and convent on 5 January, 1437-8. It was acknowledged and executed with little delay, and, on coming to Durham on 17 January, he met with no opposition. Prior Wessyngton, indeed, lodged an objection to proffering his obedience to the archbishop, on the ground that his oath of obedience to bishop Langley had included obedience to the metropolitan, and that he himself, as ex officio successor of the late bishop during the vacancy of the see, ought not to be required to do further homage. This, however, was over-ruled: Wessyngton duly swore obedience, and the commissary proceeded in his examination of individual members of the convent. It seems as if the articles of examination submitted to each were of a somewhat formal nature; for, when next day the examination was finished, Marchall dissolved his visitation at the request of the prior and convent without publishing the detecta or delivering verbal injunctions. One of the most interesting features of the documents connected with this proceeding is the schedule containing a list of the names of the inmates of the cathedral priory. Most of these people are mentioned several times in the Durham Account Rolls, edited for the Surtees Society by Dr. Fowler, and the study of their career as there unfolded throws considerable light upon the part played by the individual religious in the life of his convent.

Towards the end of February, a little more than a month later, Marchall made a special visitation of the bishop of Durham's jurisdiction in Allertonshire at Leake. The brief detecta from the several parishes, with the commissary's consequent admonitions, are recorded. The most important of these concern dilapidations at North Otterington. It was not, however, till the beginning of 1438-9 that Marchall began his visitation of the diocese of Durham as a whole. His programme is marked by that methodical arrangement and grasp of local geography which are distinguishing features of the schedules drawn up by Kempe's clerks. Starting at Durham on 20 January, he proceeded next day to Chester-le-Street, and so journeyed round the north-east corner of the county, following the coast southward as far as Greatham. On 27 January he moved inland to Sedgefield, but returned on the 28th to Egglescliffe. From this point he went on to Darlington, visited the south-western parishes at Gainford and Staindrop, and concluded the visitation of Durham archdeaconry with the parishes of Weardale and Derwentdale at Auckland on 1 Feb., and Lanchester on 3 Feb. After a week's holiday he began his visitation of the archdeaconry of Northumberland at Newcastle on 10 February. This occupied only ten days, six only being employed in visitation. Corbridge, Morpeth, Alnwick and Bamburgh were the centres chosen in addition to Newcastle, a day being allotted to Brinkburn priory. Large batches of parishes were assigned to each centre, but with a view to geographical convenience. The whole visitation, which forms an unique record in the mediaeval history of the province, was concluded on 10 February.

On 19 September, 1440, Kempe began his primary visitation of the whole diocese with a visitation of the dean and chapter, which produced a long and interesting series of detecta. These, it is true, cover much the same ground as other similar detecta; but they add fresh witness to the conclusions which can be obtained from earlier and later sources as to the special difficulties and drawbacks of the life of a chapter of secular canons—the evils of non-residence, the financial strain of residence, the tendency to slackness in the performance of service, and the moral dangers, especially to the inferior clergy, of the want of restriction in intercourse with the townsfolk. Next day the archbishop visited St. Sepulchre's chapel on the north side of the minster, and from 22 to 24 September visited the city churches at three centres, following Bowet's programme to the letter. At this point, however, Kempe's personal visitation ceased. The reason is not definitely stated; but, as it was at this period that the quarrel between the duke of Gloucester and cardinal Beaufort reached its height, and Kempe was implicated in Gloucester's headstrong attack upon the party of his uncle, it is likely that his presence was needed in London. It was from York house at Westminster, at any rate, that, on 20 February, 1440-1, he commissioned the four dignitaries of the church of York, his clerks and close friends, and John Marchall, to continue the work of visitation jointly or separately. With this mandate he enclosed a bull of Eugenius IV., obtained in the previous November, which authorised this delegation of authority.

The commissaries divided their duties systematically, with the greatest convenience alike to themselves and to the parishes visited at every centre. Bowet's schedules are modelled upon the method, simple in theory, but clumsy in practice, of arranging the parishes in blocks according to their division into deaneries. Thus the clergy and lay-folk of Badsworth were summoned before Bowet at Doncaster: Kempe's commissaries summoned them to their natural local centre at Pontefract, regardless of their artificial position in Doncaster deanery. This, if it took more forethought in arrangement, promoted expedition in visitation and prevented the awkward crowding of parishes at inappropriate centres which is a feature of portions of Bowet's programmes. The groups were so planned as to justify the requirement of daily procurations of 100*s*. Half this sum was required in the case of small groups and of certain monasteries, while nunneries were excused procurations. William Felter, the dean of York, beginning on 20 March, 1440-1, at St. Mary's abbey, visited the deaneries of Ainsty and Pontefract, travelling south-westward to Leeds and Pontefract, and returning by Selby. He reached York in time for Palm Sunday (9 April), and, setting out again at the end of the Easter octave, began to visit Doncaster deanery at Barnsley on 24 April. His work was concluded with a visitation of the spirituality of Snaith on 2 May: he slept that night at Selby and probably returned to York next day.

On 9 May two of his fellow commissaries, John Kexby, chancellor of York, and John Marchall, opened the visitation of Nottingham archdeaconry at Blyth. Their route did not differ very materially from that taken by Bowet in 1409, but they effected in twenty-three days a programme which he had fulfilled in twenty-five. Their visitation ended at Wallingwells on 31 May, the Wednesday before Whitsunday. On Monday, 19 June, at Dunnington, close to York, they began to visit the archdeaconry of Cleveland, with which they combined the spiritualities of Allerton and Allertonshire. Over this they spent sixteen days as compared with the leisurely twenty-seven days allotted by Bowet. On 5 July they were at Malton, on their way home. Ten days later, on 15 July, they proceeded to complete the visitation of York archdeaconry at Otley. The deanery of Craven had been left unvisited by Felter, and this they visited from 16 to 19 July.

The archdeaconry of East Riding, to which Bowet had devoted special patience and thoroughness, was left to the summer of 1442. On 11 May, the morrow of the Ascension, Felter and Marchall began to visit the deanery of Buckrose at Westow. Following the obvious route to Scarborough and then southward to Bridlington, they turned westwards on 17 May from Burton Agnes to Warter priory, and came back to York on the night of the 18th for Whitsuntide. On Saturday after Trinity Sunday they went to Wilberfoss, and, visiting part of Harthill deanery on the way, finished their work in Dickering deanery at Lowthorpe on 5 June. The next five days were spent in Holderness. On 11 June they were at Hull, on 12 June at North Ferriby, and from the 13th to the 15th at Beverley, visiting the provostry and the minster. The details of their visitation of the minster remain in full, with some brief detecta and an interesting list of the canons and other clergy of the church. On the 16th and 17th they completed the deanery of Harthill, when one of them appears to have gone for two days to carry out a somewhat inadequately planned visitation of the spirituality of Howden. Their twenty-four days in the archdeaconry form some contrast to Bowet's forty-four, and their proceedings may have been more perfunctory. The clever planning, however, of the Whitsuntide interval, and the extreme neatness with which the ground was covered so as to avoid two journeys over the same route, reflect great credit on their arrangements; and the archdeaconry itself must have felt the serious burden of the financial side of the visitation far less than in the case of Bowet's protracted stay.

Finally, in the late summer of 1442, Kempe himself arranged to visit the archdeaconry of Richmond, which was at this time vacant by the death, as seems certain, of Henry Bowet, the near kinsman whom archbishop Bowet, with a generosity unparalleled even in an age when almost every prelate reserved some of his best rewards for one of his young relations, had loaded with preferment. The almost equally favoured, and certainly more able Thomas Kempe, succeeded him in November 1442. The year is not mentioned in the schedule of this visitation, the mandate for which was not copied into the register, and the dates are given in a somewhat insufficient form. That the year, however, with which the dates agree was 1442 is quite clear from the fact that the churches appropriated to the archdeacon of Richmond, which Kempe had properly omitted from his programme in 1428, were now included as being in the archbishop's hands with the rest of the archdeaconry. The visitation was divided into two parts, beginning on a Saturday, presumably 25 August. Starting at West Tanfield, and visiting the deaneries of Catterick and Richmond together for six days, the archbishop came south to Boroughbridge deanery on 3 and 4 September, and concluded his visitation east of the moors at Ripon on the 6th. Here he probably stayed for his September ordination. On the 15th, the morrow of Holy Cross day, he began west of the moors at Preston with the deanery of Amounderness. Kendal and Lonsdale deaneries were taken together on the 18th, 19th, and 20th, and then the archbishop proceeded into Furness. After concluding this part of the visitation at Dalton on 25 September, he waited for nearly a month, postponing the visitation of Coupland deanery to the four days from 19 to 22 October. It is of course not certain whether he actually carried out these plans. So far as the planning and order of the centres goes, the improvement upon the programme of 1428 is very noticeable, and, owing to greater economy in time and place, the number of days occupied was only twenty-four as compared with thirty.

If the details of these visitations are somewhat barren, they have their value as shewing in a very complete form the general process of a diocesan visitation in the middle ages. The lists of churches and vicarages, although a few omissions occur here and there, afford the most complete contemporary catalogue of the benefices in the mediaeval diocese of York. They do not include, however, those which were in the peculiars of the chapters of York, Southwell, and Ripon: over these the archbishop had no jurisdiction as visitor. It may be claimed that the visitations of Richmond archdeaconry in 1428 and of the diocese of Durham in 1437-8 and 1438-9 are records of special importance in view of the infrequent exercise of visitatorial rights by the archbishop in both districts. And lastly, the various mandates of visitation supply a comparative study in the composition of this type of document which cannot fail to be without interest to students of the formal aspect of the contents of episcopal registers. In addition to such illustration and comment as has seemed advisable in the notes, an attempt has been made in an appendix to give a more complete account than has hitherto existed of some of the persons whose names occur incidentally in the text.

The editor desires to record his obligations to the archbishop of York's registrar, Mr. A. V. Hudson, for affording him ready access to the registers in which the accompanying documents are contained. He is also indebted to Mr. William Brown for advice and help.

* Of seven churches, two (Walton and Thorp Arch) in Ainsty; two (Saxton and Newton Kyme) in Barkston Ash; the remaining three in Skyrack. Nunappleton priory is in Ainsty. The arrangement of parishes is geographically very awkward; but, as Walton, Thorp Arch, Collingham and Bardsey were all appropriated to St. Sepulchre's chapel, the convenience of the impropriators was probably consulted, as their proctors could appear at a single centre near York, instead of making more than one journey to a distance.

‡ Bolton held the chantry, a presentable benefice, in Allerton Mauleverer church at a later date. The archdeacon, jure devoluto, collated it to him 24 May, 1437 (ibid., p. 32), but this was presumably a second institution. Wytton was merely the capellanus amotivus or conduct who served the cure.

* William Baumburgh was inst. to Goldsborough on the pres. of Richard Goldesburgh, 22 April, 1425, on exchange of the vicarage of St. Mary Bishophill junior, York, with Thomas Espham (ibid., p. 25). He appears among the legatees of Stephen le Scrope, archdeacon of Richmond, who, as prebendary of Knaresborough, had an interest in the church and parish of Bishophill, in 1418 (Test. Ebor., I., 387, and see note in appendix); his bequest was a silver covered cup with the word Jesus on the top of the cover. A former rector of Goldsborough, William Alnwick, was one of Scrope's executors. Baumburgh died before 11 April, 1435, when his successor at Goldsborough was inst. (MS. Harl. 6978, f. 31 d). His will (ibid., p. 31) bears date 6 March, 1434-5, and was proved at Norwich 23 March, 1434-5, and at York 28 March, 1435. At this time he was also rector of Risby, Suffolk, which he probably obtained by virtue of a papal dispensation of 6 March, 1426-7, to hold an incompatible benefice for ten years with Goldsborough (Cal. Papal Letters, vii., 532). He left £10 to the fabric of Goldsborough church and £5 for a cope for the same, 100*s.* to Bishophill church, and 10 marks to the church of Bamburgh. He probably was a native of Baumber in Lincolnshire, as Baumburgh or Bawmburgh is the most usual form of his name.

‡‡ The capacitates of the vicars of Great Ouseburn and Whixley were the certificates of their capacity or right of holding benefices with cures of souls attached. Being religious, they were technically incapable of such tenure. Special latitude, however, was allowed to canons, especially to Premonstratensians, in this particular; and the Trinitarians of Knaresborough, the impropriators of Whixley, although their order is usually counted among those of friars, were, like the Bonshommes of Ashridge, regarded as canons. * For John Wessyngton, prior 1416—46, see note in Rites of Durham, p. 213, and index to the same work for various references to his work. He doubtless was a native of Washington in Chester ward, co. Durham. He was a member of the convent and ordained priest in 1394-5, when he celebrated his first mass (Durh. Account Rolls, p. 599). His literary labours in compiling a chartulary are mentioned in 1407-8 and 1408-9 (ibid., pp. 138, 423, 456): for his treatise De Origine Monachatus see Rites of Durham, p. 124 n. He was sacrist from 1408 to his election as prior in 1416: his account rolls for this period, printed in Durh. Account Rolls, pp. 402—6, contain much interesting detail with regard to the stonework and furniture of the church. As prior, he was responsible for the building of the sacristy (now destroyed) on the north side of the quire of the cathedral, and of the corresponding library (now the song-school) on the south. He was buried in the north transept, before the entrance into the north aisle of the quire (Rites of Durham, p. 22). See also Scriptores Tres., p. cclxviii. sqq.

† Stephen Howden occurs in the list of monks in 1409 and was sub-prior as early as 1420 (Durh. Account Rolls, pp. 457, 259).

‡ Feretrar c. 1402-3—1409, prior of Finchale in 1420 (ibid., pp. 457, 458, 269).

§ The two monks of this name, who held various offices in the monastery, are hard to distinguish in the account rolls. John Durham, senior, however, feretrar in 1420 (ibid., p. 269) is probably the same as the John Durham, senior, of 1437-8, who was probably in the infirmary at this time.

‖ Feretrar 1439-40—1441-2 (ibid., pp. 470—2).

¶ Sic. There are numerous entries relating to Barry in Durh. Account Rolls. In 1400-1 he was one of the monks sent to the cell at Lytham, Lancs. (p. 137). He was hostiler of the monastery 1406-7—1422-3 (see extracts from his rolls, pp. 138—141) and terrer during much of the same period (pp. 299—303). His roll as receiver of income from the Rainton coal-mine extends from 1409—19 (p. 708). He was one of the two monks sent to London in 1416 to obtain confirmation of prior Wessyngton's election (p. 614).

 William Ebchestre celebrated his first mass in 1408-9 (ibid., p. 402). In 1416-7 he appears to have been sent to study at Oxford (p. 287), where in 1420-1 he was warden of Durham college (p. 228), and incepted as bachelor in theology about the same time (pp. 463, 303). He became sacrist probably about 1426, but his early rolls seem to be lost (pp. 408—11). In 1440-1 he was one of the representatives of the convent at the general Benedictine chapter at Oxford (p. 627). He was elected prior in 1446 in succession to Wessyngton (p. 85) and resigned in 1456. See note in Rites of Durham, p. 219, where it appears that the inscription on his tomb-slab before the altar of our Lady of Bolton in the south transept stated that he died in 1456. But it is clear that he retired upon a pension, which he was still receiving in 1458-9 (Durh. Account Rolls, p. 638). He died probably before 1462 (ibid.).

† Swyneshed was a monk in 1400-1 (ibid., p. 137).

‡ Thomas Morby appears in the list of monks in 1409 (ibid., p. 457). Cellarer 1419—22 (pp. 56—8). He was surveyor of the work of the infirmary in 1420 (p. 269).

§ Witton is also in the list of 1409. He was paid 6*s.* 8*d.* a few years later by the almoner pro factura nove tabule (ibid., p. 227).

‖ John Gonwarton is in the list of 1409. He was infirmarer c. 1447-8—1454-5 (ibid., pp. 275—7, where he appears as Gunwerton and Gonnerton). Gunnerton is in Chollerton parish, Northumberland. The decanus in a monastery was originally a monk who had the supervision of a band of monks, ten in number. At Durham the two decani were apparently survivals of an obsolete practice: they probably corresponded to the quartus and quintus priores found, e.g., at the Cluniac house of Lewes, with disciplinary functions like those of the deans of a college. Altus decanus seems to mean "high," i.e., principal "dean."

¶ See note on p. 223 above, upon the elder John Durham. Both Durhams filled several offices in the convent. John Durham, junior, was cellarer in 1417 (ibid., p. 55), and he may be the monk of that name who was feretrar from 1418 to 1433-4 (pp. 462—8).

 Commoner before 1430-1 (ibid., p. 288).

†† Celebrated his first mass c. 1410 (ibid., p. 403). Garnerer in 1416-7 (p. 614).

§§ Commoner in 1420 (ibid., p. 269). He apparently became hostiler in this year: one roll of Thomas Nessvyll (sic) exists for 1439-40 (p. 143). He was chamberlain c. 1440-1—c. 1444-5 (pp. 184—6).

[Notice of visitation of the dean and chapter of York for 19 Sept., 1440, dated "in hospicio nostro London' iuxta Westmonasterium," 11 July, 1440. The form used is, with a few variations, that used by Bowet, p. 194 above. Kempe is styled, as in subsequent notices, "permissione diuina tituli sancte Balbine cardinalis,"¶ etc., and the mandatory clause is addressed "decano et capitulo vel, absente decano, capitulo predicto."]

Detecta in eadem.

[Detecta in the above-mentioned visitation.]

i. In primis detectum est quod, in defectu visitacionis decani et capituli, domus prebendales et perpetuarum firmarum ecclesie Eboracensis multum sunt ruinose et in locis plurimis sunt collapse.

ij. Item quod pecunie recepte de executoribus canonicorum mortuorum pro reparacionibus in domibus suis fiendis non expenduntur circa huiusmodi reparaciones: ymmo conuertuntur in priuatos vsus huiusmodi recipiencium.

iij. Item quod mansio prebende de Fenton' male reparatur, ac quod vacce, porci et equi sunt ibidem custoditi; et iuuencule de mane et de sero habent sub illo colore ¶ Kempe was created cardinal on 18 Dec., 1439, when Eugenius IV. endeavoured to strengthen his position against the conciliar party by creating seventeen new cardinals, including the Greeks Bessarion and Isidore of Kieff. Lewis of Luxemburg, archbishop of Rouen and administrator of the see of Ely, was also included in this creation (Pastor, Gesch. der Päpste, i., 311).

 The prebendary of Fenton at this time was John Langton (coll. 20 May, 1438), master of Pembroke hall, Cambridge. He res. in 1441 (Le Neve, iii., 184).

recursum ad illum locum, in quo quidem capellani ciuitatis* habent cameras suas.

iiij. Item quod diuerse vicarie vacant in choro, et, eo non obstante, pensiones et alia comoda vicariarum huiusmodi plene leuantur et non exponuntur ad vsum debitum.

v. Item quod, licet due partes vicariorum ad minus essent simul ad omnia diuina in choro presentes, et diebus festiualibus omnes, hoc tamen obseruatur adeo quod diebus ferialibus contingit sepius quod non sunt ibidem vltra xij in choro.

vj. Item quod vicarius, perdens denarium ex eo quod abest a matutinis, solet se ob hoc absentare a choro per totum diem; quam ob rem esset augenda pena pro singulis horis, videlicet matutinis, missis et vesperis, vt sic absens perdat denarium, nisi eius absencia fuerit legitime approbata.

vij. Item quod capellani cantariarum, qui dicuntur persone ecclesie, non veniunt ad chorum secundum quod artantur vi composicionum suarum, et non curant sustinere et reparare domus cantariarum suarum :† ymmo collabuntur in eorum defectu in verisimilem perdicionem huiusmodi cantariarum.

viij. Item domus prebendales de Newbald', Fridaythorp', Driffeld', Stillington', Fenton', Bugthorp' et Laghton' propter defectum reparacionum multum sunt ruinose, et quamplures paciuntur defectus, quos nemo corrigit.‡

* Apparently the chaplains of the civic guilds or of chantries in the city which were in the gift of the mayor and corporation. In York Mem. Book, ii., 17 sqq. is an interesting document relating to a dispute between the communitas of parish priests in York and the communitas of chantry and stipendiary priests in 1388, concerning the claim of mortuaries from the latter by the parish priests. The mayor declared that all the chantries of the city and suburbs were, and are, founded by the citizens and nobles of the city, and the chantry and stipendiary priests "sunt speciales oratores civium, patronorum suorum et magistrorum suorum, a quibus habent huiusmodi cantarias et stipendia, unde vivunt." The case was decided in favour of the chantry priests.

† The incorporation of the chantry priests of the minster into St. William's college did not take place till 1454-5.

‡ The two prebendaries of Newbald were Thomas Morton and Richard Leyot, for accounts of whom see Visitations of Religious Houses (Lincoln Record Soc.), i., 14, 215-6, 203-4. The other prebendaries were: Fridaythorpe, Thomas Chichele, archdeacon of Canterbury (ibid., i., 187-8); Driffield, Robert Rolleston, archdeacon of Durham and provost of Beverley (see note in appendix); Stillington, Thomas Bekynton, archdeacon of Buckingham, afterwards bishop of Bath and Wells (see Visitations of Religious Houses, ut sup., i., 179-80); Fenton, John Langton (see note  on p. 238 above); Bugthorpe, Richard Cordon or Broun, archdeacon of Rochester, coll. 1431; Laughton, Prospero di Colonna, cardinal of San Giorgio in Velabro, coll. 1427, celebrated for his classical tastes and excavations at the lake of Nemi.

ix. Item prebendarius de Vlfskelff'* per diuersas vendiciones boscorum dicte prebende graue vastum fecit in eadem.

x. Item quod mercimoniorum empcio et vendicio exercentur infra ecclesiam et limites eius, sicut in publico foro.

xj. Item quod multociens quibusdam vicariorum ecclesie non datur facultas celebrandi missas propter defectum ministrorum eorum, qui deberent eis in officio misse ministrare.

xij. Item de peruersa interpretacione cuiusdam statuti, ex cuius tenore videtur quod constituti in dignitatibus quibus est annexa residencia iurata, et eandem residenciam obseruantes, participarent de communa: quod non faciunt.†

xiij. Item quod diaconi et subdiaconi ac portitores torticiorum, carentes victu competenti, frequenter ob hoc se subtrahunt et absentant ab officiis suis.

xiiij. Item de nimiis expensis in conuiuiis in introitu faciencium residencias, ad quod nullum statutum artat; per quod multi impediuntur a residencia, qui alias vellent eam ad honorem Dei facere.‡

xv. Item quod ipsi qui vocantur sub nomine capituli ad visitacionem subeundam non admittuntur sub nomine capituli ad correccionem de detectis faciendam.§

* Alan Kirkton, coll. before 1426.

† By the traditional statute, confirmed by the statute of residence in 1221, the four dignitaries of the church, called persone because of the parsonage or cure of souls annexed to their offices, viz., the dean, precentor, chancellor and treasurer, were bound to quasi-continual residence. Accordingly, whether they held prebends in the church or not, they were included as residentes with the residentiary canons and prebendaries, and had a right to their share in the daily distribution out of the common fund. The definition of residentes in the statute of 1221 appears, however, to specify canonici only; and it seems that this was the perverse interpretation alluded to in the text. The subsequent appropriation of the prebends of Laughton to the precentorship and Driffield to the chancellorship in 1484 placed these dignitaries permanently among the canonici prebendati: the prebend of Wilton had been appropriated to the treasurership in 1241.

‡ Residentiaries keeping their prima residencia were bound by statute to entertain at their table twice the number of servers and vicars whom a residentiary was required to entertain in the ordinary course of things. As during this period of inception they received nothing from the common fund, the expense was in any case a serious consideration, and it is evident that well-to-do canons had set an example of extravagance. In Henry VIII's statutes canons were prohibited from residence unless they could shew incomes of at least £100 a year, a desirable rule for the entertainer and entertained alike.

§ I.e., corrections to be made by the chapter in common were made by a few resident members, who did not trouble to summon a general chapter for the purpose.

xvj. Item quod illius statuti non fit execucio, tenore cuius asseritur prebendarios teneri ad exhibendum capas in ecclesia.*

xvij. Item quod decanus et capitulum non certificarunt domino archiepiscopo correcciones defectuum in vltima visitacione [f. 474 d] detectorum, prout tenebantur; ex quo multa detecta manent incorrecta.†

xviij. Item quod dominus Johannes More, vicarius ecclesie cathedralis, tenet concubinam ex opposito porte vicariorum; qui eciam vix semel vel bis in anno celebrat missam.

xix. Item quod dominus Johannes Bradeway vix celebrat duas missas in anno; et alij vicarij sunt consimilium condicionum.

xx. Item quod quidam vicarij ecclesie diffamantur,‡ et eis certa crimina imponuntur; vnde scandalum ecclesie generatur.

xxj. Item quod magister Ricardus Arnall'§ reputatur minus valens ad portandum labores spectantes ad officium auditoris‖ capituli exercendum; occasione cuius defectus ministrorum ecclesie manent incorrecti.

xxij. Item licet intitulati in dignitatibus, personatubus,¶ canonicatubus et prebendis in dicta ecclesia sint iurati ad obseruandum statuta et consuetudines laudabiles ipsius ecclesie, ille tamen consuetudines non sunt eis scripte neque certe; ita quod propter hoc imminet eis magnum periculum anime. Petitur ergo quod scribantur et ponantur in certo.

* Apparently the statute of 1325, by which each canonicus prebendatus who had enjoyed the fruits of his prebend for three years was bound, on exchanging it for another benefice, to present the church with a quire cope and a palfrey, or 20 marks for the one and 10 marks for the other. The cope and palfrey were ordinarily the mortuary paid by the executors of a prebendary on his decease.

† See the documents relating to Bowet's visitation of the dean and chapter above, and the terms of Melton's composition below, for the point of this injunction.

‡ Not defamed in the vague modern sense, but specifically accused.

§ See note in appendix. He had been sub-dean for forty years, and died in the course of the following year.

‖ I.e., auditoris causarum, with judicial functions in matters concerning the chapter.

¶ The personatus are practically identical with the dignitates, including the four residentiary dignities and the archdeaconries, incompatible benefices with cures of souls attached.

† William Ayerminne or Airmyn, master of the rolls 1316—24, consecrated bishop of Norwich at Paris 15 Sept., 1325, died 27 March, 1336. As his name shews, he was a Yorkshireman. He had held Fridaythorpe preb. in York, of which he had coll., 13 Nov., 1319 (Reg. Melton, f. 73). On 23 Feb., 1315-6, he had received a grant of Masham preb. from the Crown (Cal. Pat., 1313—7, p. 398). This seems, however, to have been abortive (ibid., 1321—4, p. 137); and it is doubtful whether he actually obtained Laughton preb., of which he had a grant on 24 Oct., 1317, and again on 10 June, 1318 (ibid., 1317—21, pp. 37, 155). In 1314 he had a grant of Buckden preb. in Lincoln: the mandate to induct bears date 3 May, 1315 (Linc. Epis. Reg. Dalderby, Inst., ff. 296, 296 d). Le Neve (ii., 171, 210) states that he held Leighton Buzzard preb. in 1319, and obtained Stoke preb. in the same church 8 March, 1324-5. His other preferments included Kentish Town and Oxgate prebs. in St. Paul's (ibid., ii., 403, 420), Wellington preb. in Hereford, 8 Aug., 1320 (ibid., i., 530), Wellington preb. in Lichfield, 1325 (ibid., i., 636), Preston preb. in Salisbury, 11 June, 1317 (Jones, Fasti Eccl. Sar., p. 410), and probably Shipton preb. in the same church, 8 Sept., 1323 (ibid., p. 417, where the name is given as Aylmer), and the churches of Blisworth, Northants, to which he had a Crown pres. 7 Oct., 1309 (Cal. Pat., 1307—13, p. 193), and Bishop Wearmouth, Durham, 1317 (Jones, ut sup., p. 410). See also notice in D.N.B., s.v. Ayerminne.

‡ Hugh of Angoulême, archdeacon of Canterbury c. 1327 (Le Neve, i., 40), had coll. of Riccall preb. 4 July, 1324 (Reg. Melton, f. 82 d), in pursuance of a papal provision of 15 March, 1323-4 (Cal. Papal Letters, ii., 237). On 5 Aug., 1324, he obtained Kentish Town preb. in St. Paul's (Le Neve, ii., 414). He was also sacrist of Narbonne (see Cal. Pat. 1324—7, p. 17).

APPENDIX.

NOTES ON CANONS OF YORK AND BEVERLEY AND OTHER CLERKS WHOSE NAMES OCCUR IN CONNEXION WITH BOWET'S AND KEMPE'S VISITATIONS.

Richard Arnall, i.e., Arnold, commissary-general of the court of York in 1416, was sub-dean of York from 1409-10 to his death in 1441 (Le Neve, iii., 129). He was auditor of the chapter in 1440 (see p. 241 above). He had coll. of a preb. in St. Sepulchre's chapel, 17 April, 1414, being then LL.B. (Reg. Bowet, i., f. 47 d). This he res. on his adm. to Barnby preb. in York minster, 24 Dec., 1418 (ibid., f. 66 d), which he retained till some time before 1438, when, on 18 May, he had coll. of Langtoft (Le Neve, iii., 199), but he appears to have res. Barnby preb. before this date to Peter Irford (see Reg. Kempe, f. 16 d). He is mentioned in 1416 as vicar of Gainford, co. Durham (Reg. Bowet, i., f. 57). Surtees, Hist. Durham (iii., 11), says that he was inst. in 1412 and res. in 1418. On 28 May, 1429, he was inst. to Heversham, Westmorland, on the pres. of the abbot and convent of St. Mary's, York (MS. Harl. 6978, p. 26 d). He had ratification of his estate in Barnby preb. and Heversham on 27 Nov. following (Cal. Pat., 1429—36, p. 36): he res. this church by 17 March, 1434-5 (Harl. 6978, p. 30 d). He was uncle to John Arnall, rector of St. Saviour's, York, who died in 1446 (Test. Ebor., ii., 115).

John Bernyngham, treasurer of York. There is a note on John Bernyngham or Barnyngham in Test. Ebor., ii., 203, 204, in connection with his will, printed ibid., 203—7. An indult granted to him in 1426-7 (17 March) describes him as priest, of the diocese of Norwich. It seems probable therefore that he came from one of the Barninghams in that diocese, and that this was Barningham in Suffolk, near Thetford, appears likely from the mention of Freckenham, near Mildenhall, which is in the same neighbourhood, among the churches benefiting by his will. He apparently held this living and that of Limpsfield, Surrey, in the course of his career, but there appears to be no means of dating his tenure of either. He was installed in the prebend of Mapesbury in St. Paul's, 9 Jan., 1424-5 (Le Neve, ii., 407), and had coll. of Wetwang preb. in York, 25 Oct., 1426 (ibid., iii., 223: Le Neve calls him Bermingham in both instances). He had ratification of his estate in both prebends, 2 Feb., 1427-8 (Cal. Pat., 1422—9, p. 458), an exchange of Wetwang for Shipton preb. in Salisbury with Robert Rolleston in Dec., 1426, having apparently taken no effect (Cal. Pat., 1422—9, p. 388). He res. Wetwang on obtaining the treasurership of York in 1432 (Le Neve, iii., 161). He was inst. on 29 June, 1434, to Brompton in Pickering Lythe (Reg. Kempe, f. 376 d). On 1 Feb., 1436-7, he succeeded William Felter as dean of Wolverhampton (Cal. Pat., 1436—41, p. 32). He res. Brompton in Pickering Lythe about 8 Jan., 1447-8, and had coll. of Bolton Percy on 8 Feb., 1449-50, which he res. by 14 March, 1450-1 (Reg. Kempe, ff. 118 d, 119, 68, 72 d). He succeeded Robert Rolleston as provost of Beverley, 10 Jan., 1450-1 (Beverley Chapter Act Book, II., lxxxix.-xc.), holding the provostship with his treasurership till his death on 23 May, 1457. On Felter's death in 1450-1, he was elected dean of York by the chapter, but was ousted in favour of the royal nominee, Richard Andrew. He had quitted his preb. in St. Paul's for Oxgate preb. 21 Nov., 1453 (Le Neve, ii., 421): he held Oxgate till his death. As treasurer he was largely responsible for the completion of the south-west tower of York minster, on which his name is cut beneath one of the belfry windows (York Fabric Rolls, p. 51). He acted as Kempe's vicar-general in 1441-2, and, from the terms of Felter's will (see p. 295), was evidently a friend of Felter, Dobbes and Kexby. He was also an executor of the will of John Castell, precentor of York, with whom he was a co-founder of St. William's college in 1454-5 (Test. Ebor., iii., 155; Cal. Pat., 1452—61, p. 218), was a co-executor with John Marchall of the will of John, lord le Scrope, in 1455 (Test. Ebor., ii., 192), and was a legatee under the will of William Duffield. He and Duffield had been appointed joint keepers of the temporalities of the vacant see of Rochester in 1419 (Cal. Pat., 1436—41, p. 36), and it was probably on this occasion that he first came into connexion with Kempe, who was consecrated bishop of Rochester in that year. His own will bears date 29 March, 1457, and was proved on 28 May: for his legacy to John Marchall, see note on Marchall below.

Henry Bowet, archdeacon of Richmond, the favoured kinsman, namesake and one of the executors of archbishop Bowet, was born about 1385, as he was in his twenty-seventh year in 1411. He had a papal disp. on account of his illegitimacy to proceed to holy orders and hold two compatible benefices, which was extended on 26 Aug., 1411, to a disp. to hold any mutually compatible benefices (Cal. Papal Letters, vi., 291). He held at this time Moreton parva preb. in Hereford, which he must have obtained in 1410 or 1411 by the res. (not recorded) of John Catryk. On 24 Sept., 1413, he had coll. of Strensall preb. in York, which he quitted for Laughton preb. on 4 Jan., 1413-4 (Reg. Bowet, i., f. 48 d). He res. his preb. in Hereford by 23 May, 1414 (Hereford Reg. Mascall, f. 48), and had coll. of North Muskham preb. in Southwell on 7 July, 1414 (Reg. Bowet, i., f. 52). On 20 Jan., 1415-6, he quitted this for the second mediety of Oxton and Crophill in the same church, being at this time clerk and in legibus scolaris, and on 11 Feb. following had coll. of the preb. of St. Andrew's altar in Beverley (ibid., i., f. 55). He res. his preb. in Southwell shortly afterwards, and on 7 Oct., 1416, res. his prebs. in York and Beverley, and had coll. of South Cave preb. in York and the preb. of St. Martin's altar in Beverley (ibid., i., f. 58). He was at this time rector of Wonston, Hants, but exch. it on 16 Oct. with master Richard Colhome for the mastership of St. John's hospital, Ripon, which he res. by 4 Nov. following (ibid., i., f. 59). As subdeacon, on 20 Oct. in the same year, he had coll. of the archdeaconry of East Riding (ibid.), which probably accounts for his res. of Wonston, an incompatible benefice, four days previously. Two years later, on 6 Sept., 1418, he was promoted to the important post of archdeaconry of Richmond, on the death of Stephen le Scrope (Le Neve, iii., 140). He also was sacrist of St. Sepulchre's chapel at this time, but res. this post on 27 Dec., 1422 (Reg. Bowet, i., f. 74 d). On 20 March, 1419-20, he had coll. of Thorpe preb. in Ripon (ibid., i., f. 70 d); on 17 Sept., 1420, of Norwell Palacehall in Southwell (ibid., i., ff. 73 d, 74), and on 18 Dec., 1420, of Masham preb. in York (ibid., i., f. 74), for which he quitted South Cave preb. He continued to hold his archdeaconry and prebs. in York, Beverley, Ripon and Southwell until 1442. He died about this time: see note in Mem. Ripon, ii., 213, 214; but he appears to have res. his benefices shortly before his death. His register as archdeacon of Richmond has been lost, but there is an abstract of it among the Hutton MSS. in the British Museum (MS. Harl. 6978), and it was also used by Torre in preparing his MS. lists of incumbents.

William Cawood, canon residentiary of York in 1416, is the subject of notes in Test. Ebor., i., 395, and Memorials of Ripon, ii., 212. The account in Mem. Ripon states that his earliest benefice was Whittington, Lancs., 8 March, 1376-7. On 12 Dec., 1380, he was pres. by the Crown to Beelsby, Lincs., for which he exch. a canonry in St. Sepulchre's chapel (Cal. Pat., 1377—81, p. 582).

He was inst. 31 Dec., 1381 (Lincoln Epis. Reg. Buckingham, i., f. 110 and d). He exch. Beelsby for Warton, Lancs., 13 Sept., 1389 (ibid., ii., f. 40 d), to which he was pres. by the Crown, 21 Aug., 1389, his estate in the church being ratified 26 Nov., 1389, and 8 Dec., 1390 (Cal. Pat., 1388—92, pp. 108, 179, 355). His estate in Thorpe preb. in Ripon was ratified 13 May, 1393 (Cal. Pat., 1391—6, p. 263). His prebends in York were Thockrington (6 Sept., 1408), Botevant (25 Aug., 1414) and Husthwaite (2 May, 1419; Le Neve, iii., 217, 176, 194). He was prominent in diocesan affairs, acting as Waldby's vicar-general (Test. Ebor., iii., 314), and was one of the executors of Thomas Dalby, archdeacon of Richmond, in 1400 (ibid., i., 264: cf. iii., 13, 20). He was also active in promoting the fabric of the minster, as is shown in the account roll of 1415-6 (York Fabric Rolls, p. 33), and the portion of his will printed in Test. Ebor. (i., 395) contains bequests of books to be sold and their price devoted to the reredos of the high altar. On 10 Oct., 1410, he and others had royal licence to found the chantry of St. Wilfrid at the altar of St. Thomas the Martyr in Ripon minster (Cal. Pat., 1408—13, p. 260), and his name was also remembered at the altar of St. James (Mem. Ripon, ii., 212). He died 9 March, 1419-20: the foundation of his chantry of St. Wilfrid in York minster was dated 2 March in that year (Yorkshire Chantry Surveys, i., 23, 24: cf. York Fabric Rolls, p. 304).

JOHN CONGE, canon of Beverley. Little is known of Conge, whose chief connexion seems to have been with Wiltshire, where his name is connected with Edington (see Cal. Pat., 1441—6, pp. 217, 266). In 1420-1 he was provost of St. Edmund's, Salisbury, and held North Newton preb. in Wilton, when he had disp. (7 Jan.) to hold an incompatible benefice for seven years with his provostship (Cal. Papal Letters, vii., 224). He res. his preb. in Beverley by 3 March, 1450-1 (Reg. Kempe, f. 72).

ROBERT DOBBES, precentor of York. See Mem. Ripon, ii., 204-5 and note in Test. Ebor., ii., 146. The note in Mem. Ripon contains a full account of Dobbes, who was at the time of Kempe's diocesan visitation precentor and official of the court of York, and doctor of canon law. He held no prebend in York at this time: this was also the case with the three other dignitaries. Dobbes obtained the precentorship 2 Oct., 1439, but exch. it for the valuable living of Cottingham, to which he was pres. by the Crown on 12 June, 1447 (Cal. Pat., 1446—52, p. 56). The date of his inst. does not appear.

WILLIAM DUFFIELD, archdeacon of Cleveland. A full note on the benefices of William Duffield, archdeacon of Colchester 1425—33, and of Cleveland 1434 to his death in 1452-3, is given with his will and inventory in Test. Ebor., iii., 125—152. In addition to the information given there, it may be noted that in 1419 he and John Bernyngham were keepers of the temporalities of Rochester; and it was probably at this time that he first became one of Kempe's household clerks. His appointment to the rectory of Copford, Essex (27 Oct., 1422), and to the archdeaconry of Colchester in 1425, both took place during Kempe's tenure of the see of London, and in a disp. granted to him on 8 June, 1426, to hold an incompatible benefice with Copford, he is said to be chaplain of John, archbishop of York (Cal. Papal Letters, vii., 472). He was also keeper of the temporalities of the see of Chichester in 1420, before Kempe's brief translation from Rochester to that see in 1420-1 (Cal. Pat., 1416—22, p. 317). On 10 Sept., 1428, he was dispensed to hold an incompatible benefice for three years with his archdeaconry of Colchester (Cal. Papal Letters, vii., 544). As archdeacon of Cleveland, 13 Nov., 1434-5, he had disp. to visit his archdeaconry by deputy for seven years, at the petition of the archbishop in addition to his own (ibid., viii., 511). Under his disp. of 1428, having by this time res. Copford, he obtained St. Ewe, Cornwall, to which he was pres. by the Crown, 15 Dec., 1428 (Cal. Pat., 1422—9, p. 456) and inst. 9 Jan. following (Exeter Epis. Reg. Lacy, ed. Randolph, i., 108). He res. this benefice by 14 March, 1436-7, (Cal. Pat., 1436—41, p. 19), and obtained Clifton Campville, Staffs. He had previously had his disp. extended for a period of ten years, and this, on 26 Sept., 1438, was prolonged for his life (Cal. Papal Letters, ix., 10). This last disp. mentions his archdeaconry of Cleveland, Clifton Campville, and his prebs. in York, Southwell, and Beverley, all of which he held at his death in 1452-3. His York and Beverley prebs. were filled on 10 March, his Southwell preb. on 30 March, 1453: his archdeaconry not till 18 August (Reg. W. Bothe, ff. 28 d, 29, 30 d, 31). Thomas Mynskyp (see note on p. 272 above) was one of his executors and legatees, and John Bernyngham received a bequest of plate. He left 40s. to the church of Clifton Campville, £4 to his prebendal church of Wistow and the chapels of Cawood and Monk Fryston, and the church of Brayton, various bequests to Beverley and Southwell, 66s. 8d. for his obit at his college of Merton, Oxford, and £10 to the repair of the tower of Merton college chapel.

Brian Fairfax, precentor of York in 1416, was a younger son of William Fairfax, and brother of Thomas Fairfax of Walton, to whom he acted as executor in 1394-5 (Test. Ebor., i., 204). John Fairfax, rector of Prescot, Lancs., apparently a half-brother, who made his will on 7 June, 1393, bequeathed to Brian his books of canon and civil law and £40 in silver, to be paid in the four years after the testator's death for his maintenance while frequenting the university (ibid., i., 187). He is called "master" and was LL.B. at his inst. to Long Marston, 17 May, 1394 (Reg. Arundel, f. 47). In April, 1398, he obtained two successive presentations from the Crown to livings in the gift of St. Mary's abbey, York, then vacant, viz., to Foxholes on 18 April, for which he exchanged Long Marston, being inst. on 26 April, and to East Gilling, for which he exchanged Foxholes, on 28 April. He was inst. to Gilling on 9 May following (Cal. Pat., 1396—9, pp. 325, 327; York Sed. Vac. reg., ff. 226 and d, 228 d). On 3 March, 1398-9, he had leave of absence from Gilling "causa standi in scolis" (Reg. Scrope, f. 47 d). He had coll. of the precentorship of York on 12 April, 1410 (Reg. Bowet, i., f. 44 d), for which he exch. Gilling (ibid., f. 150), but he had a papal disp., 21 Feb., 1411-2, to hold an incompatible benefice with the precentorship for ten years (Cal. Papal Letters, vi., 207). On 4 Feb., 1420, he had coll. of Langtoft preb. (Reg. Bowet, i., f. 70 and d). He died in 1436, holding the precentorship till his death (Le Neve, iii., 155).

William Felter, dean of York. See note in Test. Ebor., iii., 115. It is clear from his will, printed ibid., 115—7, that he was a son of John Felter, who was buried with his wife in St. Mary Redcliffe, Bristol, then a chapel of Bedminster, and that the family had something to do with Keynsham, Somerset, between Bristol and Bath. He was ordained deacon on 19 Dec., 1416, in the Greyfriars church at Gloucester by John, bishop "Tyburnensis" (Worcester Epis. Reg. Peveril, f. 103: cf. Polton, f. 15), having been inst. to St. Werburgh's, Bristol, on the pres. of the abbot and convent of Keynsham, 5 Aug., 1416 (ibid., f. 76), and on 15 July, 1422, being then M.A. and B.C.L., he had a papal dispensation to hold an incompatible benefice with St. Werburgh's for ten years (Cal. Papal Letters, vii., 213, 247). He was inst., being then doctor of decrees, to the church of Frittenden, Kent, on 16 May, 1425 (Lambeth Reg. Chichele, i., f. 155), which he res. by 8 Dec., 1426 (Cal. Pat., 1422—9, p. 382). On 19 Nov., 1426, he had a grant from the Crown of the deanery of Wolverhampton (ibid., p. 381). It is not known how he became acquainted with archbishop Kempe, but he was a member of his household during the early years of his tenure of the see of York, and had coll. from him of the preb. of St. Peter's altar in Beverley, 20 Feb., 1429-30 (Reg. Kempe, f. 8 d), in which his estate was ratified, 24 May, 1430 (Cal. Pat., 1429–36, p. 36). He res. his church in Bristol by 12 Oct., 1430 (Worcester Epis. Reg. Polton, f. 85 d). On 21 June, 1435, he had coll. of the archdeaconry of York (Reg. Kempe, f. 15), and on 10 Nov. following, he had an indult to visit his archdeaconry by deputy for seven years (Cal. Papal Letters, viii., 531). On the promotion, however, of Robert Gilbert to the bishopric of London, Felter was elected to the vacant deanery of York, in which he was confirmed 11 Dec., 1436 (Reg. Kempe, f. 390). He res. the deanery of Wolverhampton about this time (Cal. Pat., 1436—41, p. 32), holding the rectory of Almondbury (see Reg. Kempe, f. 74 d) and his prebend at Beverley, together with the deanery, till his death. His inst. to Almondbury is not recorded. On 2 Sept., 1436, he obtained an indult to receive or farm out the fruits of the deanery during non-residence for three years (Cal. Papal Letters, viii., 536), in which his business in the archbishop's service is specially mentioned. He obtained no prebend in York till 1441-2, when he had coll. of Apesthorpe on 28 Feb. (Reg. Kempe, f. 47). This probably marks the beginning of his more or less permanent residence at York. He quitted Apesthorpe for Driffield preb., 14 Jan., 1450-1 (ibid., f. 71), and shortly afterwards was appointed vicar-general by Kempe, but died in April, 1451. His will, made on 6 April, was proved on 10 April. John Bernyngham and John Kexby (see pp. 291, 296) were executors; Bernyngham's legacy consisted of a pearl pair of beads, St. Bernard on the Song of Songs, and 100s., while Kexby received £4. Felter also left his copy of John of Legnano's commentary on the Clementine constitutions to Robert Dobbes (see p. 293). He bequeathed £20 to Keynsham abbey, Somerset, a vestment worth £20 to St. Mary Redcliffe, on condition that prayers should be bidden publicly on Sundays for his soul and his father's, and £10 to Merton College, Oxford. He had evidently graduated at Oxford, and had obtained his degree as doctor of canon law as early as 1426. He also left legacies of money to his churches of Almondbury and Pickering, Pocklington and Kilham, which were appropriated to the deanery, and to his former church of St. Werburgh's, Bristol, with 100 marks to the poor of the deanery, Almondbury, and his altar at Beverley (Test. Ebor., ut sup.). His executors had licence on 10 Nov., 1454, to found a chantry for his soul in honour of the Holy Trinity, our Lady and St. Jerome (Cal. Pat., 1452—61, pp. 200-1). For this chantry and its various dedications see York Fabric Rolls, pp. 278, 287, and cf. Yorkshire Chantry Surveys, p. 16 (chantry of the Cross, St. Anne and St. Anthony).

Thomas Grenewode, canon of York. See note on Test. Ebor., iii., 61, where his will, dated 20 April, 1421, and proved 6 May, is printed with an inventory. He was pres. by the Crown to Heysham, Lancs., 29 March, 1396 (Cal. Pat., 1391—6, p. 712), was inst. 5 April following (Harl. 6978, p. 17), and had ratification of his estate therein, 3 Oct., 1397 (ibid., 1396—9, p. 199). He also held the vicarage of Kendal, and was vicar-general of Henry Bowet, archdeacon of Richmond, in 1415 (ibid., p. 31). On 20 Aug., 1415, he succeeded Thomas Wyot in his preb. in St. Sepulchre's chapel (Reg. Bowet, i., f. 53 d), which he exch. three days later for Bishop's Norton preb. in Lincoln (ibid., f. 54). He obtained Thockrington preb., 1 March, 1415-6, quitted it for Grindale preb., 14 Oct., 1416, and succeeded archdeacon Scrope in Knaresborough preb., 7 Sept., 1418, which he held, together with his preb. in Lincoln, till his death on 2 May, 1421 (Le Neve, iii., 217, 191, 196; ii., 194). He was buried in the south aisle of the quire of York minster.

Thomas Haxey, canon residentiary of York in 1416. There is a memoir of Haxey in York Fabric Rolls (pp. 203—6), which enumerates most of this well-known clerk's preferments and gives many interesting facts with regard to his life. See also Mem. Ripon, ii., 230. At this particular time he held Barnby preb. in York, Tarvin preb. in Lichfield, Farndon preb. in Lincoln, Beaminster secunda (not Bedminster, as stated in York Fabric Rolls) preb. in Salisbury, Rampton preb. in Southwell, and the wardenship of the hospital and chapel of Lazenby. In 1399 his incompatible benefices were Brington, Hunts (not Northants, as usually stated), and Laxton, Notts (Cal. Pat., 1399—1401, p. 27). He had been inst. to Laxton on 17 May, 1393 (Reg. Arundel, f. 39 d), and to Brington on 17 Dec., 1396 (Lincoln Reg. Buckingham, ii., f. 284). He res. Laxton in 1407-8. He had a papal disp. to hold two incompatible benefices for three years as early as 30 Nov., 1390 (Cal. Papal Letters, iv., 395) : no subsequent extensions of this disp. appear to have survived. The account in York Fabric Rolls does not give the date of his admission to his Salisbury preb., of which he had a grant from the Crown, 27 March, 1391 (Jones, Fasti Eccl. Sar., p. 359). At the time of his death he was treasurer of York and rector of Brington (see Lambeth Reg. Chichele, i., f. 254 d), and held prebends in York, Beverley, Ripon and Southwell, as well as elsewhere.

JOHN KEXBY, chancellor of York. Nephew of William Kexby, precentor of York, whose will is printed in Test. Ebor., iii., 43—7. He was S.T.M. and rector of Oddington, Glouc., a church in the gift of the precentor of York, in 1427, when, on 3 Sept., he had a disp. to hold an incompatible benefice with his church for life (Cal. Papal Letters, vii., 520). He apparently obtained the chancellorship in consequence: Le Neve (iii., 169) notes him as chancellor in 1427, but says wrongly that he died on 20 May, 1432. There is obviously a mistake here, but Le Neve's list of chancellors at this point contains more than one error. He appears to have died in 1452 : his successor at Oddington was inst. on 9 June in that year, but the reason of Kexby's retirement is left blank (Worcester Epis. Reg. Carpenter, i., f. 162).

JOHN MARCHALL, canon of York. Master John Marchall or Marshall, res. Scruton by 30 Oct., 1434 (Harl. 6978, p. 30 d). He was rector of Scruton in 1424, when, on 11 April, he had letters conferring upon him the office of papal notary (Cal. Papal Letters, vii., 348). About 1430 he obtained a dispensation for five years to hold an incompatible benefice with Scruton, under which he obtained Wheldrake. He had coll. of the mastership of Sherburn hospital, Durham, 23 July, 1433 (Surtees, Hist. Durham, i., 139). On 19 Feb., 1433-4, he had coll. of Wanstrow preb. in Wells (Harl. 6966, p. 45), being then LL.B. On resigning Scruton, he was inst. to Heversham, Westmorland, on 17 March, 1434-5 (Harl. 6978, p. 30 d). On 4 Oct., 1435, he had a disp. to hold two incompatible benefices for life (Cal. Papal Letters, vii., 522). He had ratification of his estate in Heversham, 8 March, 1435-6 (Cal. Pat., 1429—36, pp. 496, 506). Under archbishop Kempe he became, as appears in the preceding documents, a person of considerable importance. He was receiver to the archbishop and registrar of the court of York. His successive prebends in York were Barnby, which he obtained 5 June, 1438, and Weighton, 28 March, 1443 (Le Neve, iii., 171, 224). He was one of the founders of St. William's college in 1454-5 (Cal. Pat., 1452—61, p. 218) and of the Corpus Christi guild in York in 1458 (ibid., p. 465). On 7 Feb., 1451-2, he had licence to found a chantry in Padiham chapel, Lancs., for the good estate, etc., of archbishop Kempe, himself, their parents and benefactors (ibid., 1446—52, p. 524). He was a friend of John Bernyngham, treasurer of York : they were both executors of John, fourth lord Scrope of Masham, in 1455 (Test. Ebor., ii., 192, 193), and Bernyngham in 1457 bequeathed a tall covered piece of plate, silver-gilt, fashioned like a bell with a chaplet sculptured on the cover and another on the foot, and weighing about 21 oz., to Marchall (ibid., ii., 203—7). In or about 1443 Robert Esyngwald, proctor of the court of York, left him a great piece of silver with the inscription Vinum letificat cor hominis on the cover (ibid., ii., 91, where there is a note upon this clerk). He died before 3 March, 1461-2, when his successors had coll. of his prebs. of Weighton in York, and Normanton in Southwell (Reg. W. Bothe, ff. 54 and d). He is known to have been master of Sherburn hospital as late as 18 April, 1458 (Surtees, ut sup.).

JOHN NOTYNGHAM, treasurer of York, king's clerk, was pres. by the Crown, 29 Jan., 1382-3, to Rotherfield Peppard, Oxon., to which he was not inst., and on 20 March following to the chapel of Appuldurford, I. W. (Cal. Pat., 1381—5, pp. 224, 234). Later, in 1383 and in 1384, he is mentioned as clerk of the treasury (ibid., pp. 317, 403). On 20 May, 1386, he was pres. to Thurcaston, Leices., to which he was inst. 13 March, 1386-7. He had a second pres. to the same church a year later, but res. it by 28 Sept., 1387 (ibid., 1385—9, pp. 142, 206, 350; Lincoln Epis. Reg. Buckingham, ii., ff. 205 d, 206 d). He had custody of St. Margaret's hospital, Huntingdon, 13 June, 1386 (Cal. Pat., 1385—9, p. 157). His preferments in 1387 included grants of the deanery of Tettenhall, Staffs., 18 July, and a can. and preb. in Wells, 27 Oct. (ibid., pp. 195, 234). On 27 April, 1388, he had a royal grant of the chancellorship of Hereford (ibid., p. 299), to which, after an inquiry had been held into the king's right to present, he was adm. by bishop Gilbert on 22 Oct. (Hereford Reg. Gilbert, ff. 63 d, 64 d). He had a grant of Gaia major preb. in Lichfield on 17 Sept., and of a preb. in St. George's, Windsor, on 19 Nov. of the same year (Cal. Pat., 1385—9, pp. 362, 367). He exch. this last with Thomas Haule for Cottingham, Yorks., in Jan., 1388-9 (ibid., p. 538), and this exch. appears to have been a general exch. of benefices, as Haule succeeded him in his Lichfield preb., and at Hereford, and apparently at Tettenhall (Le Neve, i., 606, 492; and cf. Cal. Pat., 1399—1401, p. 186, in all of which Haule or Hawley is wrongly called Hanley). Notyngham was granted the deanery of the free chapel of Hastings, 16 Oct., 1389, in exch. for his preb. of Combe septima in Wells (Cal. Pat., 1389—92, pp. 118, 125), and on 26 July, 1390, became chancellor of the exchequer (ibid., p. 295). He had ratification of his estate in Cottingham, St. Mary Magdalene's hospital, Ripon, and Codsall preb. in Tettenhall, 22 March, 1391 (ibid., 1391—6, p. 52). In Aug., 1394, he obtained Hollington preb. in Hastings, and about 17 Dec. following resigned the deanery in exch. for Coleworth preb. in Chichester (ibid., pp. 478, 486, 517). He obtained the archdeaconry of Nottingham in Aug., 1397 (Reg. Waldby, ff 9 d, 10 d). On 9 March, 1397-8, he had a grant of Prees or Pipe minor preb. in Lichfield (ibid., 1396—9, p. 315), and shortly after vacated his Hastings preb. (ibid., p. 381). He was re-appointed chancellor of the exchequer by Henry IV., 30 Sept., 1399 (ibid., 1399—1401, p. 5). On 18 May, 1402, being then archdeacon of Nottingham and rector of Cottingham, holding his prebs. in Chichester, Lichfield, and Tettenhall, and the masterships of the hosp. at Ripon and St. John's hosp., Nottingham, he obtained a papal collation and provision of canonries with expectation of prebends in York, Salisbury, Lincoln, Beverley, Ripon and Southwell, and of a dignity, parsonage, or office in any one of these except York, in which he already held a dignity. With this he had dispensation for ten years to hold such dignity with his archdeaconry and rectory or with any incompatible benefice for which he might exch. both or either, under the usual conditions (Cal. Papal Letters, v., 492-3). These canonries appear to have remained purely expectative; and meanwhile he seems to have held his Chichester prebend in defiance of a judgment of papal commissioners against him, from the consequences of which he was not finally absolved until 1413 (ibid., vi., 415). Before this, however, he had exch. the preb. in question for Chiswick preb. in St. Paul's, of which he had a grant on 20 Aug., 1406 (Cal. Pat., 1405—8, p. 216). He obtained Grindale preb. in York, 6 Oct., 1408 (Le Neve, iii., 191), but quitted it for Langtoft preb. on 8 Sept., 1409 (Reg. Bowet, i., f. 43), and had ratification of his estate therein, 16 Feb., 1409-10 (Cal. Pat., 1408—13, p. 163). On 7 Aug., 1415, he quitted his archdeaconry for the treasurership of York (Reg. Bowet, i., f. 53 d), resigning Langtoft preb. about the same time, and obtaining the preb. of St. Andrew's altar in Beverley on 9 Oct., 1416 (ibid., i., f. 58 d). During the later years of his tenure of the archdeaconry he appears to have exacted his dues without performing visitations, under pretext of an indult to visit churches and receive procurations by accumulation. This indult was revoked in consequence in 1413-4 (Cal. Papal Letters, vi., 410). He held the treasurership and Cottingham until his death, 20 Dec., 1418 (Le Neve, iii., 161; Reg. Bowet, i., f. 191). He was one of the founders of a chantry in Well church in 1399 (Cal. Pat., 1399—1401, p. 31). The will of Robert Lascy of Gateforth, 12 Feb., 1426-7, contains a bequest for a chaplain to celebrate in the chapel of Gateforth for the soul of master John Notyngham (Test. Ebor., ii., 1).

ROBERT ROLLESTON, provost of Beverley. For a general account of Robert Rolleston, see Beverley Chapter Act Book, ii., pp. lxxxvi—lxxxix. He appears to have been a native of Beverley, and to have entered the service of Henry IV., who appointed him clerk of the works of the palace of Westminster, etc., 13 March, 1407 (Cal. Pat., 1405—8, pp. 310, 311). His first ecclesiastical preferment appears to have been Mablethorpe St. Mary, Lincs., in which his estate was ratified, 18 Dec., 1403 (ibid., p. 305). His inst. does not seem to be recorded. On 15 Oct., 1409, as subdeacon and engaged in the king's service, he had a disp. from proceeding to higher orders on account of his benefice for seven years (Cal. Papal Letters, vi., 123). On 14 Jan., 1410-11, he had coll. of Woodborough preb. in Southwell (Reg. Bowet, i., f. 46), and before 1412-13 res. Mablethorpe (Linc. Epis. Reg. Repyngdon, Inst., ff. 60 d—62), having been inst., on the pres. of Ralph, earl of Westmerland, to Wyberton, Lincs., on 13 June, 1412 (ibid., f. 56). He exch. Wyberton for Charing, Kent, 28 March, 1413 (ibid., f. 63 d). On 10 June, 1418, he was appointed keeper of the king's wardrobe (Cal. Pat., 1416—22, p. 150), and was pres. by the Crown to Warton, Lancs., on 2 Sept., 1420, and again on 9 July, 1421 (ibid., pp. 299, 374). He was inst. to Warton on 30 July, 1421 (Harl. 6978, p. 22), on 20 May of which year he had a grant of the mastership of the hospital of St. Katherine by the Tower (Cal. Pat., 1416—22, p. 341). On 4 April, 1422, he had coll. of Shipton preb. in Salisbury (Jones, Fasti Eccl. Sar., p. 417). He was re-appointed keeper of the wardrobe to Henry VI., 1 Oct., 1422 (Cal. Pat., 1416—22, pp. 3, 105), and on 19 Nov. following obtained Portpool preb. in St. Paul's (Le Neve, ii., 428). On 16 July, 1425, he received a grant of the preb. of St. Katherine's altar in Beverley, void by the death of Thomas Haxey (Cal. Pat., 1416—22, p. 224). It was not long after this that he obtained the archdeaconry of Durham, but whether this was in July, 1425, when Robert Gilbert may have vacated it by accepting the treasurership of York, or in Sept., 1426, when Gilbert certainly did vacate it on obtaining the deanery of York, is uncertain—probably at the earlier date. In Dec., 1426, he meditated an exchange of his preb. in Salisbury with John Bernyngham for Wetwang preb. in York (Cal. Pat., 1422—9, p. 388). This was not effected; he res. his prebs. in St. Paul's and Southwell, however, about this time, and res. his preb. in Salisbury by 1 April, 1428. This general resignation was probably due, in the first instance, to his preferment to the archdeaconry which he had certainly obtained before 1427-8 (see Cal. Papal Letters, vii., 44, 45), and, in the second, to his accession to the provostship of Beverley on 7 Dec., 1427 (Beverley Chapter Act Book, ut sup.). He obtained, on 4 Oct., 1431, a disp. to hold the incompatible benefices of Warton and the archdeaconry of Durham, or other two, for ten years, in prolongation of a previous disp. in similar terms granted by pope John XXIII., while Rolleston was rector of Mablethorpe. As the earlier disp. must have been granted before 1412-3, Rolleston must have obtained his archdeaconry after its lapse; another disp. had been issued to him on 21 Sept., 1431, which mentions his provostry and preb. in Beverley in addition to his other benefices. As one disp. does not seem to cancel the other, the two together probably covered a period of twenty years, beginning retrospectively about 1422 or 1423 (Cal. Papal Letters, viii., 340, 343). He is described in these as a continual member of the king's household and of a great noble race. The disps. were extended for life on 28 Jan., 1436-7, and on 10 Oct., 1437, this last disp. was extended to include three incompatible benefices (ibid., 594, 659—60). On 17 March, 1435-6, he had a grant of Carlton Kyme preb. in Lincoln (Cal. Pat., 1429—36, p. 511), and on 24 Nov., 1436, had coll. of Driffield preb. in York (Le Neve, iii., 183). Under his latest disp. he appears to have obtained the church of Cottesmore, Rutland, which he exch. for Framlingham and the chapel of Saxtead, Suffolk, 30 Aug., 1438 (Linc. Epis. Reg. Alnwick, f. 143 d). He res. his keepership of the wardrobe by 1444 (Cal. Pat., 1441—6, p. 311; cf. ibid., 1446—52, p. 4). He died 12 Jan., 1450-1 (Beverley Chapter Act Book, ut sup.), still holding his provostry and rectory, and probably his archdeaconry, in which he was succeeded by William Scrope (see below). In 1440 (14 May) he had received an indult to visit his archdeaconry by deputy for life (Cal. Papal Letters, ix., 110). He was one of the executors of the will of queen Katherine, Henry V.'s widow, appointed in the king's place in 1437 (Cal. Pat., 1436—41, p. 47) and on 30 Oct., 1444, had licence to found the chantry of St. John of Beverley and St. Katherine at his prebendal altar of St. Katherine in the south-east transept of Beverley minster (ibid., 1441—6, p. 322).

Stephen le Scrope, archdeacon of Richmond, was a younger son of Stephen, second lord Scrope of Masham, and nephew of archbishop Scrope. See notices in Test. Ebor., i., 385; iii., 33; Mem. Ripon, ii., 188-9. His will (Test. Ebor., i., 385—9) shews that he was a member of Gonville hall (the hall of the Annunciation of the B.V.M.) in Cambridge university, of which he was chancellor in 1416. During his uncle's tenure of the see of Lichfield he received preferment in that cathedral church, obtaining Offley preb. on 21 March, 1395-6, and Colwich preb. on 21 Nov., 1397 (Le Neve, i., 615, 591). This last he exch. for Dernford preb. on 15 June, 1400, which he did not hold for long (ibid., i., 596). Meanwhile, after the translation of his uncle to York, he had coll. of Langtoft preb. on 28 Dec., 1399 (Reg. Scrope, f. 2). Soon after this he had coll. of Knaresborough preb. on a date unspecified (ibid.), but, according to Le Neve (iii., 196), held it from 3 to 5 Feb., 1399-1400. He continued to hold Langtoft, which he quitted for Driffield preb. on 4 March, 1400-1 (Reg. Scrope, f. 3 d). On 19 May, 1400, he had coll. of the archdeaconry of Richmond, but was ousted temporarily by the papal provisor, Nicholas Bubwith. He had coll. of Studley preb. in Ripon on 18 Oct., 1401, and obtained the archdeaconry of Richmond eventually on 18 March, 1401-2 (ibid., ff. 3, 4 d, 9 d). He held his archdeaconry until his death in 1418, when he also held Knaresborough preb., for which he had exch. his preb. in Ripon on 14 Jan., 1408-9 (Le Neve, iii., 196). His will, dated 24 Aug., 1418, was proved on 7 Sept. following. It contains valuable bequests to the new reredos of the high altar in York minster, his prebendal churches of St. Mary Bishophill and Knaresborough, the churches of Bolton-le-Sands, Clapham, Easingwold and Thornton Steward, which he held as archdeacon, and the churches of Hornby, Yorks., and Laugharne, Carmarthenshire. Thomas Haxey was one of his legatees. Among his executors was William Alnwick, the future bishop of Norwich and Lincoln, to whom he left, with pieces of plate, several books of canon law with reversion to the library of York minster.

William Scrope, canon of Beverley. See Mem. Ripon, ii., 195; Test. Ebor., ii., 188 n, and full note on his benefices in Visitations of Religious Houses (Linc. Record Soc.), i., 188. In this last note it is suggested that he may have obtained the archdeaconry of Durham by Rolleston's res. in 1448, which is indicated by a significant change of benefices about that time; but, as shewn in the note above, it is possible that Rolleston held this archdeaconry at his death in 1450-1, and Scrope is not mentioned as archdeacon, so far as has been yet noted, before 1452. He was a witness to the will of his uncle Stephen le Scrope, archdeacon of Richmond, in 1418 (Test. Ebor., i., 385—9), and an executor of his brother, John, lord Scrope, in 1453-4 (ibid., ii., 134). He was also an executor of the will of Sir Hugh Wilughby of Wollaton, Notts., 15 Sept., 1443, proved 15 Dec., 1448 (ibid., ii., 134).

Richard Tone, archdeacon of East Riding. Richard Tone, Tune, or Toyne, and his brother Robert, who was also beneficed in the diocese of York, were sons of John Tone, tanner, of Beverley (Test. Ebor., iii., 195). Richard Tone, doctor of decrees, had coll. from bishop Spofford (also a Yorkshireman and abbot of St. Mary's, York) of the first portion in the church of Bromyard, Herefordshire, 5 Oct., 1426 (Her. Epis. Reg. Spofford, i., f. 97 d). His estate in this benefice was ratified 10 July, 1427 (Cal. Pat., 1422—9, p. 388). He also was rector of Cheam, Surrey, and held the preb. of Congreve in Penkridge in 1428, when, on 22 Nov., he received a disp. to hold an incompatible benefice with his church for seven years (Cal. Papal Letters, viii., 90). He res. his portion in Bromyard early in 1428-9 (Reg. Spofford, ii., f. 123), but continued to hold his preb. in Penkridge till 1432 (Harl. 6966, p. 43). Under his disp., he obtained the additional church of Beddington, Surrey (Cal. Papal Letters, viii., 526). He res. either Cheam or Beddington for St. Crux, York, to which he was inst. 12 Feb., 1429-30 (Reg. Kempe, f. 8 d). As rector of St. Crux (wrongly described as in London) he had an indult for a portable altar, 17 June, 1430 (Cal. Papal Letters, viii., 190). He exch. St. Crux for Lafford preb. in Lincoln, 10 June, 1432 (Reg. Kempe, f. 10; Linc. Epis. Reg. Gray, ff. 83, 83 d). On 12 July, 1434, he was inst. to Hambleden, Bucks. (Linc. Epis. Reg. Gray, f. 50 d), and, while holding this church with that of Aldington, Kent, applied for a dispensation to hold two incompatible benefices for life. Before the disp. was granted, however, he had res. Hambleden, early in 1433 (ibid., f. 53), and, on 26 March, had coll. of the archdeaconry of East Riding (Reg. Kempe, f. 15). On 13 Oct., 1435, the disp., which had not included the acceptance of a dignity with cure of souls, was re-issued with suitable wording, mentioning Tone as holding his archdeaconry with Aldington and the fourth preb. in Stoke-by-Clare, Suffolk (Cal. Papal Letters, viii., 526). On 8 June in the same year, he had an indult as rector of Aldington and chaplain of archbishop Kempe, to take or rent the fruits of his benefices for ten years while non-resident (ibid., viii., 538). He res. his preb. in Lincoln in 1434, before his admission to the archdeaconry (Le Neve, ii., 161). On 7 Nov., 1441, he had coll. of Thockrington preb. in York (Reg. Kempe, f. 47 d), and in March, 1441-2, of the preb. of St. Mary's altar in Beverley (ibid., f. 48). On 18 Oct., 1443, he had coll. of the church of Nunburnholme, which he res. by 14 March, 1443-4 (ibid., ff. 50, 196 d), having been inst. to Irnham, Lincs., on 9 March (Lincoln Reg. Alnwick, f. 94). He was inst. to St. Saviour's, York, 1 Nov., 1446 (ibid., f. 188). In 1447 he res. North Leverton preb. in Southwell, and quitted Thockrington preb. by 31 Jan., 1448-9 (Le Neve, iii., 426, 217). He now seems to have held North Newbald preb. and the church of Carlton-in-Lindrick, Notts, of which he had coll. on 9 January (Reg. Kempe, f. 65 d), but res. both on receiving coll. of Bolton Percy, 13 March, 1450-1 (ibid., f. 72 d). He retained Bolton Percy, his archdeaconry, and his preb. in Beverley until his death in 1463-4, having res. Irnham in May, 1457 (Lincoln Reg. Chedworth, f. 11 d). His successor at Bolton Percy had coll. 10 March, and his successors in his archdeaconry and at Beverley on 13 March of that year (Reg. W. Bothe, ff. 25 d, 26, 58, 58 d). He acted as vicar-general under archbishops Kempe and William Bothe, and was frequently employed as a commissary in diocesan business.

William Waltham, canon residentiary of York in 1416. See notes in Test. Ebor., iii., 55, 56, and York Fabric Rolls, p. 220, where his relationship to the family of Ravenser and to John Waltham, bishop of Salisbury, is noted. His family came from Waltham, Lincs., near Grimsby. William Waltham, archdeacon of the East Riding in 1385-6, and preb. of Ampleforth 1386—9 (Le Neve, iii., 142, 169), seems to have been an uncle. About 1390 the younger William had prov. of Twyford preb. in St. Paul's, but exch. this, before obtaining possession, in 1390-1, for Compton preb. in Wells. At this time he held expectative provisions of canonries in Wells and Salisbury, and of a dignity, parsonage or office in Salisbury, had been provided to Tisbury, Wilts., and a canonry and preb. in York on the next vacancy, and was engaged in litigation about the church of Orpington, Kent (Cal. Papal Letters, iv., 383, 384). His estate in his Wells preb. was ratified 27 May, 1391 (Cal. Pat., 1388—92, p. 415). His inst. to Tisbury does not seem to be recorded. He obtained Kingsteignton preb. in Salisbury earlier in the same month (Jones, Fasti Eccl. Sar., p. 423), and Dunnington preb. in York on 3 April, 1393 (Le Neve, iii., 181), while he succeeded in obtaining provision of Orpington. He had further provision, 20 July, 1393, of a preb. in St. Paul's (Cal. Papal Letters, iv., 468). This was Kentish Town, of which he obtained possession on 30 June, 1395 (Le Neve, ii., 404), and had ratification on 5 Feb., 1395-6 (Cal. Pat., 1391—6, p. 658). On 3 Nov., 1393, he was inst. to Algarkirk, Lincs., in succession to John Ravenser (Lincoln Reg. Buckingham, ii., f. 83). In 1395 he exch. his Wells preb. for Chalke preb. in Wilton (Cal. Papal Letters, iv., 505), in which his estate was ratified on 1 May (Cal. Pat., 1391—6, p. 564), the ratification being followed by a formal grant of the preb. on 16 Oct. (ibid., p. 637). At the close of July, 1397, he received an indult to receive the fruits of his benefices while non-resident (Cal. Papal Letters, v., 23). He had ratification of his estate in Dunnington preb., 26 Sept., 1397 (Cal. Pat., 1396—9, p. 202), having received a week earlier, on 19 Sept., papal provision of the church of Somersham, Hunts (Cal. Papal Letters, v., 79; cf. Cal. Pat., 1396—9, p. 262). His benefices at this time, not counting Somersham, to which he does not appear to have been inst., were valued at 480 marks. On 8 Nov., 1397, he had a grant of the archdeaconry of Exeter (Cal. Pat., 1396—9, p. 279), which, if he obtained, he held for only a short time (see Le Neve, i., 394). The Exeter registers record no collation. He exch. his Salisbury preb. in 1397-8 for St. Martin's altar preb. in Beverley, to which he was pres. by the Crown on 17 March (Cal. Pat., 1396—9, p. 324), and had coll. on 22 March of Leighton manor preb. in Lincoln, for which he exch. his preb. in St. Paul's (Lincoln Epis. Reg. Buckingham, Inst., ii., ff. 444, 444 d), and of which he had ratification on 16 April, 1398 (Cal. Pat., 1396—9, p. 320). He was inst. to his preb. in Beverley on 8 May, 1398 (York Sed. Vac. Reg., ff. 228, 229). On 18 March, 1398-9, he exch. his preb. in Lincoln and Dunnington preb. for Cave preb. in York (Lincoln Epis. Reg. Beaufort, ff. 217, 217 d; 19 March in Reg. Scrope, f. 1 and d) on a pres. by the Crown, bearing date 26 Feb. (Cal. Pat., 1396—9, p. 477). On 15 Sept., 1399, he had a grant from Richard II. of the mastership of St. Leonard's hospital, York (ibid., p. 595), and on 14 Oct. he obtained ratification of his estate in this, in his churches of Algarkirk and Somersham, and his prebs. in York, Beverley and Wilton (ibid., 1399—1401, pp. 4, 5). The Lincoln registers contain no record of his having obtained possession of Somersham. He was one of the founders of the Ravenser chantry in Lincoln minster in 1398 (ibid., 1396—9, p. 477), and is named as one of the supervisors chosen in July, 1407, to select workmen for the building of the great tower of York minster (ibid., 1405—8, p. 383). His name appears as a legatee of John Scarle in 1405 (Test. Ebor., iii., 24), and as one of the legatees to each of whom bishop Skirlaw of Durham left a silver basin and ewer in 1406 (ibid., i., 410). In 1414 he and Thomas Haxey were executors of John Neuton, treasurer of York, who left Waltham a silver basin with a great letter M on the bottom (ibid., i., 367). He died in 1416: his will (ibid., iii., 55 sqq.) bears date 2 Sept. with codicil of 5 Oct., and was proved at Beverley on 9 Oct. He desired to be buried in Lincoln minster, next his uncle John Ravenser. His bequests included £40 to the fabric of York, 100 marks to that of Lincoln, and £40 to that of Beverley minster, the last bequest being devoted to the construction of the great east window. To Beverley he also left most of his law-books with the reversion of others: other books of canon law were left to King's hall, Cambridge. He bequeathed an antiphoner to Algarkirk church, and a portas and missal, which had belonged respectively to his uncles Richard and John Ravenser, to the Ravenser chantry at Lincoln. His executors gave a long silver banner-stave for processions to the church of York (York Fabric Rolls, p. 220).

Thomas Wyot. There were two or three clerks of this name at the beginning of the fifteenth century between whom it is hard to distinguish. One of these, on 14 June, 1393, obtained a papal mandate to receive collation of a reserved canonry and prebend in Ferns cathedral, which was disputed by another claimant. He was vicar of Kilcolumb, co. Kilkenny, and had recently had provision of the vicarage of Bray, Berks, which he proposed to resign on accepting a benefice in the gift, joint or several, of the bishop and prior and convent of Winchester (Cal. Papal Letters, iv., 468). He had ratification of his estate in the preb. of Whitechurch or Slecultre in Ferns, 4 May, 1399 (Cal. Pat., 1396—9, p. 521), and again 19 Sept., 1401 (ibid., 1399—1401, p. 484). Thomas Wyot, chaplain, had coll. of the church of Horton, Bucks, 4 Aug., 1402 (Lincoln Epis. Reg. Beaufort, Inst., f. 192 d), in which his estate was ratified on 10 March, 1402-3 (Cal. Pat., 1401—5, p. 206), after some dispute which necessitated the issue of a commission to keep the peace (ibid., p. 275). On 18 Dec., 1403, he exch. Horton for Wymondham, Leices. (Lincoln Epis. Reg. Beaufort, Inst., ff. 83, 193). On 19 Sept., 1411, Thomas Cordon exch. Wymondham for Stanwell, Middlesex (Lincoln Epis. Reg. Repyngdon, Inst., f. 166 d).

The Wyot, however, associated with the diocese of York appears to be Thomas Whiot, priest, inst. to Birkby on 20 March, 1403-4 (Reg. Scrope, f. 166). Thomas Wyot, priest, on 8 Dec., 1409, exch. Birkby for a mediety of Cotgrave, Notts (Reg. Bowet, i., f. 213), which he res. by 5 June, 1411 (ibid., f. 219 d : see also a mention of him in Cal. Papal Letters, vi., 273). This is probably the same person as the canon of St. Sepulchre's chapel mentioned on p. 195, who obtained his preb., being then a household clerk of archbishop Bowet, 22 Sept., 1409 (Reg. Bowet, i., f. 44 d). He had coll. of the succentorship of York, 1 Sept., 1429, and of Normanton preb. in Southwell, 27 Dec., 1421 (ibid., ff. 70 d, 72 d, 73). The archbishop left "vnam integram robam de scarlet" and 100s. to sir Thomas Wyot (Test. Ebor., iii., 82-3). Thomas Wiot vacated the preb. of St. Mary's altar at Beverley by death in 1441-2 (Reg. Kempe, f. 48).
